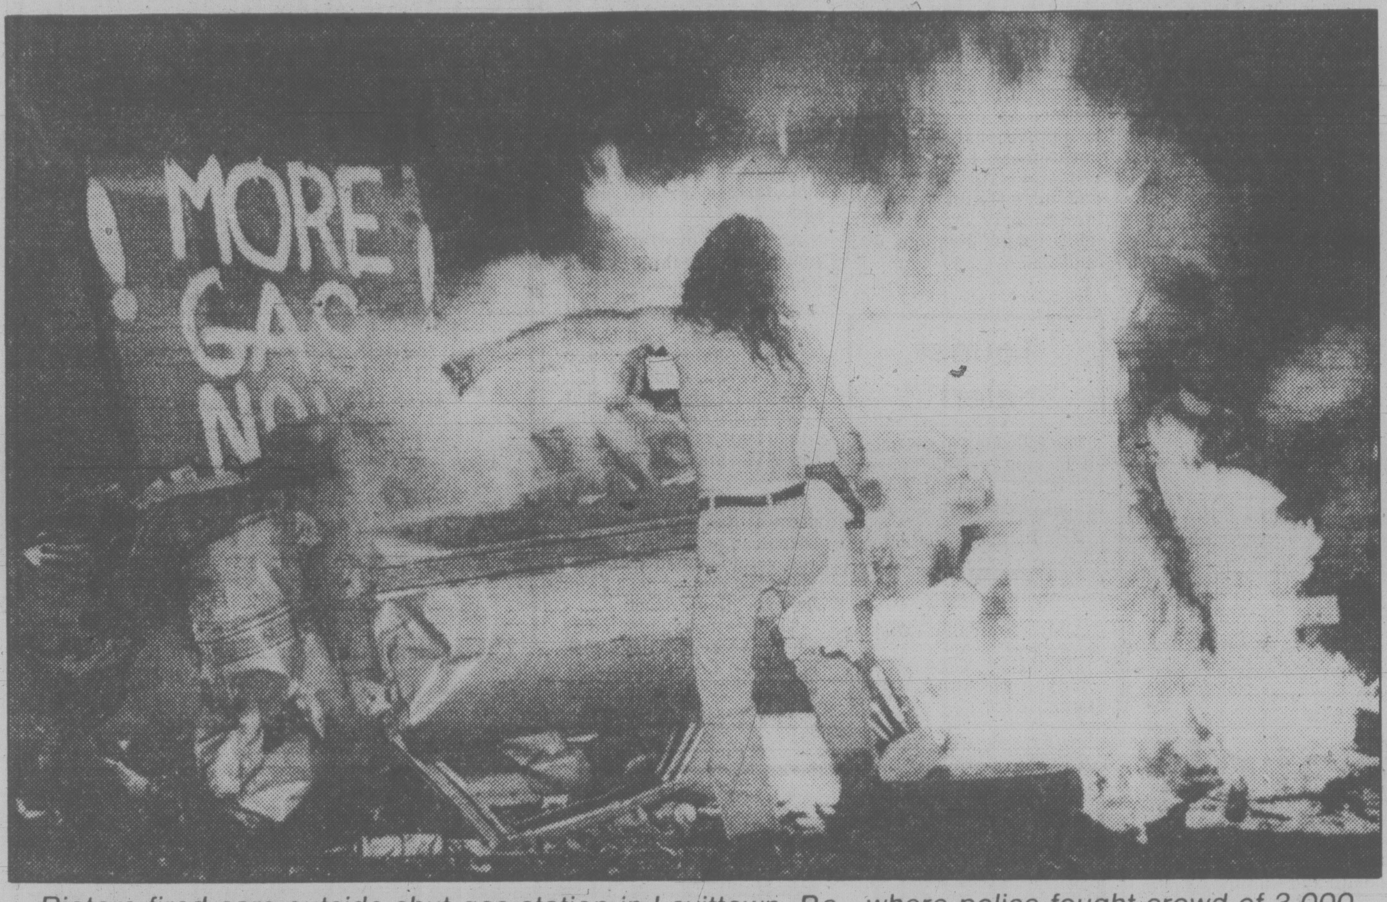
Carter urges oil import cut



Rioters fired cars outside shut gas station in Levittown, Pa., where police fought crowd of 3,000

Times News Services

U.S. President Jimmy Carter wants Canada and the other major industrial countries attending the Tokyo economic summit conference to make a joint effort to reduce oil imports, administration officials said Monday.

This might aggravate the oil shortage that has caused long gasoline lines in the United States. But officials said an import reduction would help avoid worse problems in the future.

"What we are after is a collective effort on the part of the countries at the summit to reduce energy imports and we will be working with those countries as we have in the past to come up with some common approach to doing this," said a U.S. spokesman

But he said the United States will not enter the summit with a preconceived plan on how such a reduction would be accomplished and he said he hopes other countries will also keep an open mind.

U.S. officials here are growing sensitive to what they feel may be a European effort to make it appear that the United States, in league with Japan, is blocking firm action to restrain oil imports. They worry that the United States might be unfairly blamed if the summit fails to agree on a joint effort to solve the oil crisis.

In addition to Canada and the U.S., the summit on Thursday and Friday will be attended by leaders of Britain, Japan, West Germany, France and Italy.

Prime Minister Joe Clark will represent Canada and plans to make a personal appeal of Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira to purchase Canadian nuclear reactors. (See story on page 8).

In Geneva, meanwhile, the 13 OPEC oil ministers today began the cartel's most crucial price-fixing conference since the world oil crisis five years ago. A substantial increase was certain, with only the exact amount in doubt.

The ministers met under tight security with current Ministerial Council Chairman Mana Saeed Otaiba of the United Arab Emirates presiding.

The conference, scheduled to last two or three days, has pitched conservative Saudi Arabia against OPEC's more radical members.

The Saudis are the only OPEC members to have stuck to the benchmark price of $14.54 fixed in March. The others all impose various surcharges.

Water break in C. Saanich

There was water, water everywhere and not a drop to drink when the main line serving Central Saanich burst at Martindale pump station early today.

Mike Williams, senior design engineer for the Capital Region District, said the break occurred about 12:15 a.m. but wasn't noticed until nearly two hours later.

By then several thousand gallons had spilled out of the 16-inch line flooding the pump station, eroding a section of the road to a depth of 10 feet and covering several acres of nearby agricultural land. There were unconfirmed reports two homes were damaged by the deluge.

Water service was knocked out for 10 to 20 farms and homes on Martindale Road and restrictions were slapped on all homeowners in the municipality for 24 hours.

Williams said the pipe should be repaired and service restored by later today but it will take several weeks before the pump station is fully operational.

Cause of the break is not known.

Eight-month Pacific Press strike over, papers Friday

VANCOUVER (CP) — The final two holdouts among six unions at Pacific Press have voted in favor of a new contract, clearing the way for Vancouver's two major daily newspapers to resume publication later this week after being shut down for almost eight months.

The Printing Pressmen's Union and the Wholesale Drivers' Union, which had earlier rejected the proposed 40-month pact, changed their minds in a second vote Monday.

The result of the vote was announced this morning by Dave McIntyre, secretary-treasurer of the British Columbia Federation of Labor which became directly involved in the dispute in the past few weeks. No figures were released.

Clark Davey, publisher of the Sun, and a spokesman for Paddy Sherman, publisher of the Province, said the dailies would return Friday.

The contract provides a 34.25-per-cent increase for the 1,400 workers.

Davey, who has not published a single edition of the Sun because his appointment came just as the strike began, said in an interview he wouldn't be happy "until I get the first copy in my hot little hand."

He said if the papers publish Friday the strike-lockout will be two days short of the record set earlier this year by the Montreal Star which was out for 243 days.

McIntyre, a former pressman's union leader, said the two holdout unions had reluctantly agreed to return to work. He said an agreement should have been reached long ago and blamed management for bargaining in bad faith.

McIntyre said the two unions were "quite unhappy" with the settlement and that the industrial relations climate at Pacific Press will have to improve during the term of the pact.

Under the bargaining arrangement at the company which produces the two papers, a majority in each of the six unions was needed to ratify the settlement proposals.

When the strike started, there were predictions it would last at least six months as the company indicated it was set to dig in its heels on the issue of press manning. The issue — the cause of long newspaper strikes in Montreal, New York and Washington — arises from a clause which determines how many workers operate the presses during a given shift.

Seven trucks torched

Times News Services

A trucker was shot in North Carolina, seven rigs were burned in Massachusetts, and Tennessee offered a reward to protect working truckers as scattered violence continued in the strike by independent haulers.

In Levittown, Pa., officials banned gatherings of five or more people and received assurances of help from state police Monday after two days of violent clashes over gasoline shortages led to what the sheriff called "a complete breakdown of law and order."

"They burned cars, destroyed buildings, attacked police officers — it was a genuine riot," Raymond Grimes, a Levittown policeman, said of the disturbances. "It was not an orderly, get-in-line, walk-down-the-street demonstration."

Stockpiles of heating oil for the winter remain at all-time low levels in the United States and oil company executives say they may not be able to build them up enough to reach the government's target before winter.

The companies say they are trying to maintain a balance to satisfy both demand for gasoline and heating oil, but that producing enough heating oil may mean less gasoline this summer.

Against that background, a top federal official said Monday the government will take drastic steps if necessary to guarantee enough home heating oil this winter.

Tanker afire in collision

FIUMICINO, Italy (AP) — A French freighter and an Italian tanker carrying 1.5 million gallons of gasoline collided and burst into flames today, killing four persons and injuring 30, authorities said. They said at least 20 are missing.

The ships were identified as the 12,202-ton French-registered Emmanuel Delmas and the 4,942-ton Vera Berlingieri. The early morning collision occurred in heavy fog about 25 kilometres off this port near Rome.

Authorities said the French freighter, owned by the merchant ship firm Chargeurs Delmas Vieljeux based in Paris, had a crew of 30 and one passenger. The Italian tanker first was reported to have a crew of 22, but later the number on board was put at 24.

Dense fog shrouded the scene of the collision hampering the use of helicopters in rescue operations, authorities said. The rescue director said there was a danger the tanker might explode at any moment.

The commander of the Civitavecchia port, 80 kilometres north of Rome, who co-ordinated rescue operations, said four bodies had been recovered, all members of the French freighter's crew.

The commander, Aldo Savelli, said 23 members of the 24-man Italian tanker's crew were picked up by rescue ships. Many were injured, some with severe burns, Savelli said.

Three crew members of the Emmanuel Delmas were among the survivors picked up by rescue ships, he said.

Copters raid Nkomo's HQ

SALISBURY (UPI) — Zimbabwe Rhodesia's new black government today launched its first raid into Zambia and struck guerrilla chief Joshua Nkomo's headquarters near the capital of Lusaka.

The dawn raid by five helicopters killed 20 people, sources in Lusaka said, and was a show of strength designed to coincide with the opening of Zimbabwe Rhodesia's black-dominated Parliament. (See story on page 23).

But the session was nearly overshadowed by an announcement from James Chickerema, who resigned last week as the country's first vice president, that he may join forces with the black guerrillas operating in Zambia against the government in Salisbury.

Witnesses said commandos struck a guerrilla administrative centre in the Lusaka suburb of Roma at dawn. Sources in Lusaka said 20 people were killed and about the same number injured.

The Zimbabwe Rhodesian military command said one member of the strike force was killed and another wounded.

The raid on the "intelligence headquarters" of Nkomo's Zimbabwe Peoples Revolutionary Army was followed by an air strike "against a known terrorism base outside the city."

Lusaka, which will be host to the commonwealth conference to be opened by Queen Elizabeth Aug. 1, is 93 miles west of Zimbabwe Rhodesia's northwestern border.

The raids, the first into Zambia since Bishop Abel Muzorewa became prime minister, preceded the formal opening of Parliament, whose House of Assembly has 72 black and 28 white members.

After opening ceremonies, which stressed military might, some 200 screaming, placard-carrying Muzorewa supporters staged a demonstration against Chikerema, the veteran black politician who last week quit as first vice president and formed his own faction.

Chikerema held an impromptu news conference at which he said it is "very possible" he will seek an alliance with guerrilla leaders based outside the country as part of a drive for national unity.

E & N refused spray permit

CP Rail has been denied a permit to use herbicides along 200 miles of E & N Railway right-of-way.

The decision of the provincial government's Pesticide Control Appeal Board was welcomed today by John Cooper, chairman of the E & N Steering Committee, one of 13 Vancouver Island organizations which opposed the application at a Nanaimo hearing June 14 and 15.

"I think it's really significant," Cooper said.

CP Rail sought a permit to use up to 2,400 pounds of herbicide — the soil sterilants tebuthiuron and bromacil — to control weed growth on the roadbed.

Opponents argued at the hearing that the problem of vegetation growth would not be so bad today if routine maintenance had not been neglected in the past.

Highways back on skids, road deaths soar 23%

The number of highway fatalities rose sharply again in April, continuing the general increase this year that reversed the drop in injury accidents last year.

Fatalities in April jumped 23 per cent over the same month last year and injuries were up 21 per cent.

The use of seatbelts became mandatory in B.C. 18 months go.

That legislation, combined with the earlier speed limit reduction and the CounterAttack program aimed at drinking drivers, were believed responsible for a March decline in auto injuries and deaths last year.

But the trend reversed in 1979. During the first four months of the year — the latest statistics available — all seven categories of auto accidents montitored by the government are up over the same period last year.

From January through April, fatalities jumped 23 per cent, injuries increased 26 per cent and the number of accidents was up 12 per cemt.

Property damage accidents increased nine per cent.

The Motor Vehicle Branch feels people are still buckling up so other causes are responsible for the increase in injury accidents.

Officials said earlier some motorists are frustrated by the lower speed limits and habitually exceed it.

Others obey the lower speeds and the combination has led to an increase in accidents in passing situations.

Fire risk closes park trails

Trails in Mount Douglas and Thetis Lake parks were closed to the public today due to the fire hazard.

Park administrator Al Smith said the ruling does not include picnic and swimming areas.

Regional parks, such as East Sooke and Witty's Lagoon, remain open.

Warm weather often brings fog to the Strait of Juan de Fuca which reduces fire hazards along the island's coastal belt.

Sandinistas execute 130

Times News Services

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Sandinista guerrillas said today they had executed 130 supporters of President Anastasio Somoza during the past two weeks in the rebel-controlled city of Matagalpa.

An announcement on the Sandinista "Free Matagalpa" radio said that among those killed was Alvaro Valle Salina, brother of Managua's police commander, Nicolas Valle Salina. The radio did not identify any of the others executed.

In Managua, the Nicaraguan government radio today claimed that national guard troops have "cleaned up" the eastern Managuan neighborhoods that have been held by the guerrillas and announced the guard is ending military operations after three days of heavy fighting and national guard bombarmment of the area.

But the Sandinistas claimed that they are still holding the area and eyewitnesses said the guerrillas still are dug in in barricades and bunkers.

"The guard tried to move in right after the bombing," Associated Press photographer John Hogland reported Monday after a visit to the battleground in the Nicaraguan capital's eastern slums. "The guerrillas popped up out of their holes and let them have it."

Hogland entered the sector during a heavy rain. When it stopped, he found himself in the middle of the bombardment.

"You could see them pushing the bombs out the door of a helicopter," he said. "It looked like they had them mounted on a rack inside."

Refugees from the fighting said some of the helicopters dropped 55-gallon drums of liquid that exploded and burned.

During the bombing, the guerrillas took refuge in holes covered with planks, paving stones and dirt.

"The Sandinistas' morale is high," Hogland reported. "They are convinced they can hold out until the columns in the countryside link up and move on Managua.

"The guard is not advancing. Sometimes the guerrillas move around behind them. I saw two armored cars back to back with their machine-guns firing in opposite directions.

He said many civilians are still in the area despite government warnings to leave.

"I asked one woman why she didn't leave," he reported, "and she responded: 'Where would I go?' "

The Sandinistas have been fighting in Managua for more than three weeks. They have driven Somoza's national guards from several major cities, have bottled them up in their garrisons in most other provincial cities and a string of villages and are holding a stretch of territory near the Costa Rican border.

But Somoza told a Honduran radio interviewer: "I will not abandon my supporters nor my army as the shah of Iran did." He said if he is driven from the presidency before his term ends in 1981, "I will then become a guerrilla to fight my political enemies until I defeat them."

Brazil's conservative military government suspended relations with Somoza's government. A foreign ministry spokesman told reporters in Brasilia the action was "a natural consequence" of an Organization of American States resolution Saturday calling on Somoza to resign.

"The resolution made it implicit that the Somoza government was no longer recognized as legitimate by the community of Latin American nations," the spokesman said.

Mexico, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Grenada and Panama have broken relations with the Somoza regime, and Panama has recognized the five-member junta proclaimed by the Sandinistas as a provisional Nicaraguan government. Peru's foreign minister said Monday his and other Latin American governments are considering breaking relations with Somoza.

Former Ghana leaders slain by firing squad

ACCRA (Reuter) — Two former heads of state — Gen. Fred Akuffo and Gen. Akwasi Afrifa — were publicly executed by firing squad today as Ghana's new military rulers continued their purge of former leaders.

Four other senior officers were also executed.

They were: Col. Roger Felli, former foreign affairs commissioner; Joy Amedume, former naval commander; Maj.-Gen. Robert Kotei, former chief of defence staff, and George Boakye, former air vice-marshal.

Akuffo was overthrown by junior officers three weeks ago.

His predecessor as head of state, Gen. Ignatius Acheampong, was executed by firing squad on June 16.

Akwasi Afrisa was head of state in the 1960s after helping to lead a coup that overthrew Kwame Nkrumah in 1966.

Today's executions took place at the Teshie military firing range. A large crowd had gathered, but was kept about 300 metres back from the execution ground.

Ghana's new rulers, led by Flt. Lt. Jerry Rawlings, took power as the country prepared for elections to return to civilian rule.

Federal deficit up sharply

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government's spending deficit in April was $3.74 billion, up sharply from a deficit of $2.88 billion in the same month a year ago, the finance department reported today.

The department's regular monthly statement of financial operations showed that revenues in April dropped to $1.63 billion frm $1.78 billion in April, 1978.

Expenditures rose to $5.38 billion in April frm $4.66 billion in the same month a year earlier.

Government spending for April — the first month of the 1979-80 fiscal year — includes its contributions to the unemployment insurance account for the previous year. More than half of the increased spending was the result of higher contributions to this account.

The government contributed $2.19 billion for unemployment insurance in April this year compared with $1.72 billion in April, 1978.

Among other significant spending increases in April were payments of $629 million in interest charges on the national debt, up from $501 million a year earlier.

The defence department spent $213 million in April compared with $154 million in the same month a year earlier and department of health and welfare spending rose to $1.12 billion from $1.02 billion in April, 1978. This was mainly because of higher payments to the provinces for medicare and increased old age security payments.

Spending for the 1979-80 fiscal year is estimated at $52.6 billion and the forecast deficit is $10.75 billion.

$282M contract awarded

VANCOUVER (UPC) — The four-company consortium Revelstoke Constructors has been awarded a record $282.5 million contract to build a concrete dam and power plant on the Columbia River, B.C. Hydro announced today.

The government-owned utility said Revelstoke Constructors submitted the lowest of five bids for the contract, the biggest single construction contract in B.C. Hydro's history. The highest bid was $440.2 million.

B.C. Hydro said work would start immediately on the giant dam and powerhouse project that will generate 1.8 million kilowatts of electricity by 1984.

It will have a peak generating capacity of 2.7 million kilowatts by the 1990s, the largest facility in British Columbia. Mica Dam now operates at a capacity of 1.7 million kilowatts.

The concrete dam will measure 1,500 feet in length at crest and 500 feet in height. The lake to be formed will cover 125 square kilometres, extending in length almost to the Mica Dam, 130 kilometres upstream.

The four companies comprising Revelstoke Constructors were Pitts Pacific Construction Ltd; Atlas Construction; Genstar Construction Ltd., and Janin Construction Ltd.

PLAY THE NAMEGAME

GAME No. 1 OFFICIAL ENTRY FORM BELOW!

WIN! $1,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES EVERY OTHER WEEK!

WIN! GRAND PRIZE TRIP FOR TWO TO HAWAII, By WARDAIR!

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday and Sunday and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.

Jobless benefits sought — at age 2

ELIZABETH KING

QUEEN MOTHER
. . . visiting Canada

Actress Elizabeth Alexandra King, who at age two is one of the youngest applicants ever to seek California unemployment benefits, struck out. Sucking a lollipop, Elizabeth toddled out the door ahead of her mother, Judith King, who said employment officials told her the little girl had not worked enough days to qualify for the benefits. Elizabeth has been out of work since she finished three television commercials for which she was paid $3,000 by Fisher Price Toys, her mother said. " She's paid taxes for the last two years," said Mrs. King. "It suddenly occurred to me she had earned the money and there's no reason why she shouldn't collect it. Every actor does."

The new Mr. Manitoba is a 23-year-old Winnipeg man who had to defeat his own father for the title. Les Berthelette, a Canadian Forces employee, won the bodybuilding crown Monday night at the Red River Exhibition in Winnipeg. The winner's father, 42-year old Morris Berthelette, was one of the 10 losers.

Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, left today for a week-long visit to Canada, her first since 1974. The 78-year-old Queen Mother will stay in Halifax until the weekend when she visits Toronto.

Patty Duke Astin has come full cycle. As a child star, she won an Oscar for her portrayal of Helen Keller in The Miracle Worker — the story of the very special relationship Miss Keller had with Anne Sullivan, the incredible teacher and companion who pulled her out of her blind, deaf world and taught her to speak. Now Patty is coming full cycle. In a remake of the story, for NBC-TV's new fall programming, she'll take the role of Miss Sullivan to a Helen Keller played by Melissa Gilbert of Little House on the Prairie.

And finally, Ron Gordon proved you can fight City Hall, and win . . . and baseball fans in San Francisco now will get their hot dogs for a nickel less. Gordon was outraged when the Recreation and Park Department Commission agreed last year to raise the price of wieners to pay for a new hot dog wrapping machine. They claimed the machine could wrap only 1.63 not dogs per minute. After spending $1,600 of his own money, Gordon finally proved the machine is designed to do 45 dogs a minute — a volume negating the need for the extra nickel. The clincher — and cancellation of the increase — came when he personally wrapped a dozen a minute — by hand — before the commission.

Gulf spill massive disaster

MEXICO CITY (AFP) — An accident involving the sinking of a floating oil rig following an oil and gas leak in the Gulf of Mexico appears to have developed into the greatest ecological disaster in the history of oil exploration.

As a result, 2.5 million barrels of crude oil are expected to keep gushing out into the waters of the Mexican Caribbean, 80 kilometres off Campeche in the southeastern part of Mexico, for the next two to three months.

The Caribbean, reputed for its fauna and flora, now is threatened by a gigantic 200-km-wide oil slick, which has already reached the coast of Mexico's Tabasco province, preceded by thousands of dead fish.

The unprecedented mishap — about 100 million litres of oil have spilled across the Gulf of Mexico — began on June 3 with the sinking of a floating rig of the Mexican national oil company Pemex after oil and gas leaked at a depth of 3,616 metres during well drilling.

The oil slick has already affected the entire Campeche area, one of the world's largest shrimp breeding zones, where 90,000 people make their living from shrimp fishing.

Half of the oil and gas spewing into the sea has been burning at the surface since the start of the disaster.

Red Adair, an U.S. expert on control of oil field fires, and Pemex experts managed for the first time to control the fire and plug leak but another gap caused by the pressure in the damaged upper part of the well triggered another major leak and rekindled a gigantic fire.

Apart from the environmental devastation, financial losses in oil, damaged equipment and costs of salvage operations are already estimated at tens of millions of dollars.

The only way of overcoming the disaster now is to drill another well in the offshore deposit, some 800 metres from the first one to reduce the pressure power of the leak, but this is not expected to be completed for another two to three months.

Meanwhile, the ever-growing oil slick now is moving to the northeast toward the Caribbean and eventually the Atlantic coasts.

Island growing off Tonga

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (AP) — An airline pilot who flies daily over the South Pacific kingdom of Tonga says he watched a volcanic island grow in the last week to a piece of land 16 kilometres in diameter.

Ron Jones, a New Zealander flying for Air Tonga, said he first noticed smoke and steam rising from the sea last Wednesday. The location was midway between the volcanoes of Kao and Late in the centew of the Tonga island chain, about 1,600 kilometres north of Auckland.

On a second flight, he reported, an eruption "was hurling small rocks as high as 500 feet when I arrived there."

Around the source of the smoke, Jones said he could see the green outline of a mountain peak beneath the ocean surface.

"The green was about two miles in diameter on Thursday," he said. "By the next day it was about five miles. On Saturday it had grown to about seven miles in diameter. On Sunday the island had emerged and was about 10 miles in diameter."

Mideast talks struggle

HERZLIYA, Israel (UPI) — Negotiators from Egypt, Israel and the United States finished a new round of negotiations on Palestinian autonomy today but admitted they have nothing tangible to show for the two days of talks.

And in Lod, a bomb exploded early today, injuring an 18-year-old Arab, police said. Israel Radio reported the man apparently was preparing the device in his home when it exploded.

The chairmen of the Israeli and Egyptian delegations, both said they would like to see Palestinian representatives take part in the negotiations but a joint statement issued after the closing session did not include a specific invitation.

"We look forward to achievements in these negotiations in the near future which perhaps, I think, will be more visible than these perhaps intangible achievements registered here," said Ambassador James Leonard, head of the American delegation.

Leonard said he was happy with the "spirit and substance" of the talks, adding, "I am not at all dissatisfied with the rate of progress."

Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil, head of the Egyptian delegation said, "I am looking forward to the future meetings so the statements read there may contain more substance and material than the present one."

Israeli Interior Minister Josef Burg said the two-day session was "helpful, constructive and will be fruitful."

The joint statement, read out by Israeli spokesman Dan Pattir, recalled that the negotiations were agreed on at the Camp David summit and in a joint letter signed at the same time as the peace treaty between Israel and Egypt.

Energy per minute metred

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Anyone who has taken a long ride they couldn't afford in a taxi will appreciate a plan by the U.S. and Canadian governments to dramatize how much energy costs on a minute-by-minute basis.

The two governments plan to place test models of an energy indicator in 600 homes in six cities to see how consumers react when they see just how much energy costs, the U.S. energy department said Monday.

The indicator, a digital clock designed to be hung on the wall, translates energy use into dollars.

The cities in the test are Montreal, Vancouver, Boston, Dallas, Minneapolis and San Francisco.

The indicator will bring a variety of bad news to homeowners.

Besides showing energy use by the minute, it will show utility costs for the next 24 hours, what the cost would be for the next hour if no appliances were switched on or off, and the approximate utility bill for the month to date.

Officials are not certain whether this knowledge will force consumers to conserve more, but they believe that when the study is completed in about 18 months they will understand a bit more about human psychology and energy use.

The study carries a price tag of $250,000, but officials saythat eventually the indicator will be able to be bought for about $50 to $100 dollars, a portion of which may be tax-deductible.

Twister hits

RADISSON, Sask. (CP) — A late afternoon cyclone destroyed a cattle farm near Radisson Sunday after narrowly missing the town. There were no reported injuries.

Jim Amson, owner of the farm 1½ kilometres north of the town, said damage could reach $25,000 on the uninsured farm.

The cylone swept across Twin Lake, missed Radisson, then tore up fences and power lines along its route before it destroyed the Amson farm.

A time for solutions

Last week Victoria's Royal Jubilee Hospital closed down a 17-bed acute care ward, claiming that the coming of summer had led to such a shortage of nurses that some closures were necessary.

Ever since, those involved in B.C.'s health care system have been tossing the blame for the situation back and forth.

Health Minister Bob McClelland confirmed that shortages of nurses are an annual summer problem, but added that this is not usually a serious problem because hospital workloads also lighten in the summer.

The nurses, however, maintain strongly that there are plenty of nurses willing to work. The problem, they say, is that the hospitals, especially the Jubilee, won't hire them because of budget restraints.

McClelland argues back that the tight government restrictions on health care budgets have not caused any decline in the quality or availability of care in B.C. hospitals.

Someone else tosses in the point that the number of chronic care patients taking up acute care beds in the Jubilee contributes to the long waiting lists of persons needing acute treatment, such as elective surgery.

It seems to be quite impossible for the ordinary citizen to find out where the truth lies. The nurses seem to have some good evidence for what they say. For example, four days before the Jubilee closed the ward, on call nurses were told not to come in because there would be no work for them. Part-time nurses on a waiting list are also being told there is nothing for them at the Jubilee, and there is certainly no indication that the hospital is making any effort to recruit nurses.

It is all very well for McClelland to say that hospital workloads lighten during the summer. Even with the lighter workloads, the waiting list for elective surgery at the Jubilee is now four or five months. Nurses find themselves greatly overworked, sometimes working 15 hours at a stretch with only one break of a few minutes.

The variance between what is being said by the hospital staff and by the minister is too great to be ignored. The public is beginning to suspect if not fear that medical treatment in hospitals is being impaired.

McClelland's explanations so far have not allayed these doubts. As the man responsible for the standards of health care available in B.C.. it is time for him to start producing solutions.

When is patronage not patronage?

It's worth noting that when Prime Minister Joe Clark appointed the former leader of his party to act as a one-man task force on Canada-Middle East relations, not a single voice was raised in the shout of "Patronage!"

Yet appointments by the former Liberal government to the Senate, to the boards of Crown corporations, to a variety of semi-official positions were widely dismissed as "porkbarrel politics" and worse.

Why is it that Clark can win approval for appointing one of his colleages to a sensitive position while Trudeau got only condemnation for doing the same thing?

First must be Stanfield's personal reputation. Although Canadians were never ready to trust him with the leadership of our country, he was almost universally respected as an honest and competent man, lacking only the charisma we apparently wanted in a leader. His report will be viewed as thorough and fair, even by Canadians who disagree with his conclusions. Few, if any, of Trudeau's appointments had gained this sort of admiration from Canadians.

Second, the job given Stanfield is not one that appears to be a lifelong sinecure. It is one that will certainly require much work. Moreover, it will last only as long as the specific study requires; within months, a year at most, it will disappear. Far too many of the Liberals' appointments appeared to have as their main goal the provision of a comfortable corner from which some loyal Grit could draw a regular salary for years, often without working very hard.

Third, the task involved is one that clearly should be done by a political person. The matter of Canada-Middle East relations is essentially political, and is closely tied to general government policy. An academic, for instance, could produce for the government reams of documents on Middle East political theory, history and economics, but could probably not introduce a proper political perspective. Far too many of the Liberals' appointments seemed to be political persons inserted into jobs that should have been non-political.

Over-all, it seems Clark is employing a former politician most appropriately. A credible and responsible former politician, given a short-term task that requires political skills, will enhance the governmental process as patronage never will.

Japan wants Canada's oil

TOKYO — Energy will likely be high on the agenda when Prime Minister Joe Clark meets Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira of Japan Wednesday for private talks before the economic summit opens here Thursday.

Oil shortages and price increases imposed by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, energy-hungry Japan will be looking to Canada for alternate sources, a senior Clark adviser speculated.

Japan imports more than 99 per cent of its oil and imports account for 88 per cent of all energy consumed by the highly industrialized island nation.

The Clark aide raised the possibility that the deteriorating world oil crisis may improve chances of Canada selling its CANDU nuclear reactor for the first time to other western industrial nations.

Chance for CANDU

Japan may look more favorably on the CANDU now, than it has previously, because Canada can supply a "safe" nuclear system plus a supply of uranium fuel that does not require enriching before it is used to generate energy, the adviser said.

Japan has some nuclear power stations in operation but nuclear power is a major political issue in the country.

Strong protests have been mounted on environmental grounds and the aftermath of the atomic bombs that fell on two Japanese cities in the Second World War lingers.

Japanese interests are already active in developing western coal resources in Canada and the Clark adviser said they may also be interested in the possibilities of new energy supplies from oil and gas exploration in the Beaufort Sea.

Although Clark had originally planned to do more listening than talking at the economic summit of the six western nations and Japan, the oil crisis may thrust him into a more prominent role, the adviser declared.

The oil crisis, caused by OPEC moved to up prices and restrain production, has injected a harsh note of crisis into the summit preparations, which was absent from the previous four, three of them involving Canada.

Canada was excluded from the first summit meeting in France, in 1975, because French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing refused to send an invitation.

The annual summits now involve Canada, United States, West Germany, the United Kingdom, Italy, France, Japan and the representative of the European community.

The world price of oil will likely go up $3 a barrel this week from $14.55 in U.S. dollars when OPEC members deliberate in Geneva just before the economic summit opens Thursday.

The huge energy potential which Canada possesses makes Clark a major player in this summit whether he wants to be or not.

The other summit nations may want to see Canada speed up its development of this huge potential, which is more varied than almost any other country possesses.

Member states of the European communities put a lid on oil imports, setting them at the same level for the next six years and they agreed to stepup development of alternate sources, particularly nuclear power, in meetings last week.

Earlier this year the International Energy Agency, a kind of consumer cartel to which Canada belongs, called for a reduction in demand on the world oil market by five per cent through voluntary restraint, development of alternative energy sources, and increased domestic production.

Greater restraint

Canada, the Clark adviser said, is against mandatory controls on oil use. Canadian policy is to meet its IEA obligation by increased production and accelerated conservation measures.

The summit is bound to discuss the need for greater restraint measures, particularly since the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, to which all participants belong, urged in mid-June that member countries further restrain their demands for oil.

President Jimmy Carter of the United States would like to see a restraint quota of seven per cent accepted by western nations. Clark said Sunday he was not committed to the Carter view although earlier reports from Japan inferred he was.

RICHARD GWYN

The knife-edge of oil crisis

OTTAWA — "We are balanced on a knife-edge, but so long as we aren't jolted by another Iran, we should be all right," a senior energy department official commented in an interview about Canada's prospects for getting by without any shortages of oil.

The official is quite right, of course. Which is a pity. We'd be better off if we experienced the cutting edge of some oil shortages.

Last week newspapers headlined the bad news that gasoline prices will be going up by three cents a gallon at the pump this summer. In almost any other country — Abu Dhabi, Kuwait and the Arab Emirates excepted — citizens would be dancing in the streets at such good news.

Our gasoline prices are just about the cheapest around. We haven't yet broken the one dollar-a-gallon barrier. In the U.S., gas, when you can find it, can cost up to $1.25 a gallon. European prices range from about $1.75 to $2.50. Japanese prices are above $3.

Bleak performance

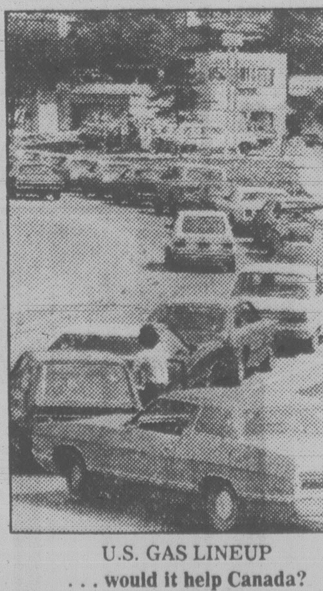
A couple of the side effects of our performance are exactly the ones you would have predicted. Sales of large, gas-guzzling cars, particularly of used versions of full-sized models which won't be made any more, are stronger now in Canada than in the U.S. Our consumption of gasoline has soared by more than four per cent so far this year, compared to an increase of less than three per cent for our total energy consumption.

This bleak performance is piled on top of one that already is downright embarrassing. According to the International Energy Agency, each Canadian consumes the primary energy equivalent of 8.7 tons of oil a year. The consumption rate in the U.S., about which we tend to feel superior, is 8.2 tons. The British, the French, the Germans and the Japanese, compared to whom in these matters we quite properly feel inferior, consume about four tons of equivalent each.

In a recent report, the agency indicted Canada for "a poor response to insulation programs, slow implementation of stronger building codes, contradictory price signals (lowering gasoline taxes and postponing oil and gas price rises) and reliance of voluntary measures in transport and industry."

As one example, only five per cent of eligible home owners have bothered to apply for the $350 grants available under the Canadian Home Insulation Program.

We aren't serious about saving energy, in short. Nor, for the moment, does it seem that we need to become serious. In the U.S., there are line-ups at gas stations, and truckers' strikes, and fights about both of these. Australia has had to impose rationing. Denmark has closed service stations for one day of each week. France has just imposed strict new speed limits. We just roll along. We owe most of our thanks to God, though perhaps government and industry do deserve some credit for not getting in His way.



U.S. GAS LINEUP
. . . would it help Canada?

Sheik Ahmed Yamani, the Saudi Arabian oil minister, probably was exaggerating when he warned this week of an absolute world shortage of oil by 1988, that would cause, "a deep, pervading irreversible recession."

Until the revolution in Iran, a small oil surplus existed.

An oil price crisis, as contrasted to an actual physical shortage of the stuff, is inevitable, however. Today's post-Iran, world price of about $18 a barrel will jump above $20 a barrel following next week's meeting of OPEC. (So-called "spot" prices for short-term sales can range as high as $30. a barrel.)

This week, Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn announced that the one dollar a barrel increase in the Canadian domestic price scheduled for July 1, by the previous government would go ahead. Our oil price — to ourselves — now will be $13.75 a barrel. Thus, rather than "moving toward" world prices as present policy requires, we will be moving away from them. As well, we will remain a full $2.50 below the comparable U.S. price.

False economy

This economy is false. The lower our price, the more we encourage ourselves to consume more oil. The more we consume, the less we'll have available for export to help balance our trade account, and the less cash we'll have to invest in developing new supplies. Yet, the higher our prices, the higher our rate of inflation and the more we imbalance Confederation by benefitting Alberta and the oil companies, which scarcely needs any more help, at the expense of everyone else.

Two ways do exist to square this circle, this is to encourage conservation through higher prices without promoting inflation, and without restricting the cash bonanza to the borders of Alberta. One would be a special gasoline tax (in France it is more than one dollar a gallon). The other would be a special tax on oil companies to scoop up windfall profits caused by oil price increases. In each instance, the revenues generated could be used to develop new energy supplies.

Hnatyshyn's decision just to go with the flow this time was predictable. He's new in office. He now has six months before the next one dollar a barrel increase scheduled for Jan. 1 to show whether he can surprise us.

Winnipeg's dry

I am writing to thank the citizens of Victoria for their expressions of concern and to let them know that we in Winnipeg are dry and comfortable. The flooding of the Red River that devastated much of North Dakota and a great part of southern Manitoba fortunately passed us by due to the Red River diversion floodway. Winnipeg was not only dry but acted as a refuge to many who were flooded to the south.

In past years whenever the Red River flooded in a serious way, we needed and received a great deal of help, but now that the city is protected by the floodway, we're fine and fortunately don't require any assistance.

We are greateful for the interest and human concern expressed by so many. — William Norrie, Deputy Mayor, City of Winnipeg.

Zoologist it is

I usually disregard William Safire's attempts to prescribe the correct use of language for his readers. However my eye caught the word "zoology" in his most recent article (Watch That Eether, Hold That Sizzim; June 16) and being a zoologist I read on. I was surprised to learn that I cannot pronounce my own professional designation correctly.

He says zoology is "zoe-ology" and will not become "zoo-ology" and explains that the "zoo" pronunciation is only correct as a jocular abbreviation of "zoological garden. Well, generations of British zoo-ology students have pronounced it thus, whether seriously or jocularly. The North American pronunciation of the word is perhaps closer to the original Greek, but if there were consistency in this matter "bye-ology" would be "bee-ology" as it is for Euopean biologists Jocularity, or better, humor might have a mitigating effect on Safire's forays into language usage. James Thurber had the same journalist's urge to impose his personal norms of usage on his readers, despite a fundamental ignorance of philology and etymology, and like Safire he got some points embarrassingly wrong; but at least his lumps were leavened with humor.

Another journalist, Edwin Newman, has made a specialty of essays on language, with greater effect and more humor than either Safire or Thurber, but he cannot shed the conceit that by the power of his pen he can rescue a lost usage.

In 1979 the reader would think that the writer was expressing a hope that Chamberlain would be successful in reaching Munich and not get a wrong connection and end up in Prague instead. Inserted at the beginning of a sentence or phrase "hopefully" has become and expression of the writer's or speaker's hopes. "Fortunately" and "unfortunately" have unfortunately gone the some way, and incredibly the journalists with linguistic bees in their bonnets have let them go without a murmur.

The abuse of "hopefully" may have been originated by politicians. But most journalists have given it their seal of approval and educators have promulgated it — a lethal combined operation. Another mispronunciation which Safire's article mentions is "nuke-u-lar" for "nuclear." I have my hopes that this will not be a lost cause, since the physicists and biologists who use and teach the word are unlikely to mispronounce it capriciously. Furthermore the spelling of the word does not naturally induce the reader to commit svarabhakti (a linguistic term for self-inflicted verbal injury). Even so, I have heard biology teachers make "an emeny" of anemone, and "nuculate" nucleate, so my confidence may not be warranted.

In commenting on the work of the recently deceased philologist Eric Partridge the June 10 Guardian noted that on the basis of a huge international correspondence with fellow philologists he was convinced that "language is the product of continuous popular creation." No amount of foot-dragging nor nagging by journalists and educators will change the process of language evolution, and, as in other evolutionary processes, there may be some unfortunate accidents along the way. They are the price we have to pay for linguistic vigor. — R.G.B. Reid, Department of Biology, University of Victoria.

Chiropractic x-rays

I have read with interest the article entitled Chiropractor Curb? dated June 20, inspired by a group in Ontario, the Consumers Association of Canada and, if I am correct, involves the efforts and interests of Dr. Murray Katz, M.D., of Toronto, a self proclaimed critic of chiropractic. The article calls into question the ability of chiropractors to deliver x-ray service.

I wish to draw the public's attention to your May 10 article, Shoddy X-rays Causing Cancer — 10 Cases a Year in B.C. From this, I quote Dr. Kenneth Taylor, radiation physicist: "The University of Toronto said Wednesday that surveys of 20 hospitals found wide variations in the amount of radiation a patient would receive while undergoing an identical x-ray. A patient in one hospital may receive as much as 60 times the exposure given to a patient in another hospital, he said."

Dr. Taylor further states some radiologists and x-ray technicians have been using more radiation than required to produce a readable picture simply through lack of concern. Dr. Wallace Roy, president of the CAR, said radiologists are unwittingly indifferent about radiation safety.

I wish to point out that these investigations were carried out in Ontario and mainly involved hospitals. I ask, where and when were parallel investigations of chiropractors' x-ray facilities done? My own unit was recently examined and approved by the appropriate department of this province, as are all chiropractic facilities. I consider chiropractic's inclusion with hospital problems in Ontario to be a clumsy smoke screen.

I point out a statement by Dr. Keller, a specialist in radiation physics, about radiation and shortening of life: "Two packs of cigarettes daily, shortens life as much as 10 years below normal. Ten per cent overweight shortens life as much as five years. If you were to have x-rays taken once a month for an entire year, your life might be shortened as little as two days." There now! Does that add to the confusion? — G. M. Grindlay, D.C., Victoria.

The sexes really DO think differently

By RICHARD RESTAK

Boys think differently from girls. Recent research on brain behavior makes that conclusion inescapable, and it is unrealistic to keep denying it.

I know how offensive that will sound to feminists and others committed to overcoming sexual stereotypes. But social equality for men and women really depends on recognizing these differences in brain behavior.

At present, schooling and testing discriminate against both boys and girls in different ways, ignoring differences that have been observed by parents and educators for years. Boys suffer in elementary school classrooms, which are ideally suited to the way girls think. Girls suffer later on, in crucial ways, taking scholarship tests that are geared for male performance.

Anyone who has spent time with children in a playground or school setting is aware of differences in the way boys and girls respond to similar situations.

Usually such differences are explained on a cultural basis. Boy's are expected to be more aggressive and play rough games, while girls are presumably encouraged to be gentle, non-assertive and passive.

As a corollary to this, many people believe that if child-rearing practices could be equalized and sexual stereotypes eliminated, most of these differences would eventually disappear. As often happens, however, the true state of affairs is not that simple.

Undoubtedly, many of the differences traditionally believed to exist between the sexes are based on stereotypes. But despite this, evidence from recent brain research indicates that many behavioral differences between men and women are based on differences in brain functioning that are biologically inherent and unlikely to be modified by cultural factors alone.

First clues

The first clue to brain differences between the sexes came from observations of male and female infants.

From birth, female infants are more sensitive to sounds, particularly to their mother's voice. Female babies are also more easily startled by loud noises.

Tests involving girls old enough to co-operate show increased skin sensitivity, particularly in the fingertips, which have a lower threshold for touch identification. Females are also more proficient at fine motor performance. Rapid tapping movements are carried out quickly and more efficiently by girls than by boys.

In addition, there are differences in what attracts a girl's attention. Generally, females are more attentive to social contexts — faces, speech patterns and subtle vocal cues.

Female infants also speak sooner, have larger vocabularies and rarely demonstrate speech defects. Stuttering, for instance, occurs almost exclusively among boys.

Girls' early linguistic bias often prevails throughout life.

Boys, in contrast, show an early visual superiority. They are also clumsier, performing poorly at something like arranging a row of beads, but excel at other activities calling on total body co-ordination.

Their attentional mechanisms are also different. A boy will react to an inanimate object as quickly as he will to a person. A male baby will often ignore the mother and babble to a blinking light, fixate on a geometric figure and, at a later point, manipulate it and attempt to take it apart.

For spatial problems, males use one hemisphere of the brain, females use both

Curious

A study of nursery pre-school children carried out by psychologist Diane McGuinness of Stanford University found boys more curious, especially in regard to exploring their environment. McGuinness' studies also confirmed that males are better at manipulating three-dimensional space.

When boys and girls are asked to mentally rotate or fold an object, boys overwhelmingly outperform girls. "I fold it in my mind" is a typical male response. Girls, when explaining how they perform the same task, are likely to produce elaborate verbal descriptions which, because they are less appropriate to the task, result in frequent errors.

In an attempt to understand the sex differences in spatial ability, electroencephalogram (EEG) measurements have recently been made of the accompanying electrical events going on within the brain.

Ordinarily, the two brain hemispheres produce a similar electrical background that can be measured by an EEG. When a person is involved in a mental task — say, subtracting 73 from 102 — the hemisphere that is activated will demonstrate a change in its electrical background.

When boys are involved in tasks employing spatial concepts, such as figuring out mentally which of three folded shapes can be made from a flat, irregular piece of paper, the right hemisphere is activated consistently. Girls, in contrast, are more likely to activate both hemispheres, indicating that spatial ability is more widely dispersed in the female brain.

When it come to psychological measurements of brain functioning between the sexes, unmistakable differences emerge. These sex differences have been substantiated across cultures and are so consistent that the standard battery of this intelligence test now contains a masculinity-feminity index.

Further support for sex differences in brain functioning comes from experience with subtests that eventually had to be omitted from the original test battery.

A cube-analysis test, for example, was excluded because, after testing thousands of subjects, a large sex bias appeared to favor males.

Most thought-provoking of all is a series of findings by Eleanor Maccoby and Carol Nagly Jacklin of Stanford on personality traits and intellectual achievement. They found that girls whose intellectual achievement is greatest tend to be unusually active, independent, competititve and free of fear or anxiety, while intellectually outstanding boys are often timid, anxious, not overtly aggressive and less active.

In essence, Maccoby and Jacklin's findings suggest that intellectual performance is incompatible with our stereotype of feminity in girls or masculinity in boys.

Research evidence within the last six months indicates that many of these brain sex differences persist over a person's lifetime. In a study at the University Hospital in Ontario that compared verbal and spatial abilities of men and women after a stroke, the women did better than men in key categories tested. After the stroke, women tended to be less disabled and recovered more quickly.

Research at the National Institute of Mental Health is even uncovering biochemical differences in the brains of men and women. Women's brains, it seems, are more sensitive to experimentally administered lights and sounds.

The investigator in charge of this research, Dr. Monte Buchsbaum, speculates that the enhanced response of the female brain depends on the effect of sex hormones on the formation of a key brain chemical. This increased sensibility to stimuli by the female brain may explain why women more often than men respond to loss and stress by developing depression.

The discoveries might possibly contribute to further resentments and divisions in our society. But must they? Why are sex differences in brain functioning disturbing to so many people? And why do women react so vehemently to findings that, if anything, indicate enhanced capabilities in the female brain?

It seems to me that we can make two responses to these findings on brain-sex differences. First, we can use them to help bring about true social equity. One way of dong this might be to change such practices as nationwide competitive examinations.

Attitude changes are also needed in our approach to "hyperactive" or "learning disabled" children. The evidence for sex differences here is staggering: More than 95 per cent of hyperactives are males.

The male brain learns by manipulating its environment, yet the typical student is forced to sit still for long hours in the classroom. The male brain is primarily visual, while classroom instruction demands attentive listening. Boys are clumsy in fine hand co-ordination, yet are forced at an early age to express themselves in writing.

Finally, there is little opportunity in most schools, other than during recess, for gross motor movements or rapid muscular responses. In essence, the classrooms in most of our primary grades are geared to skills that come naturally to girls but develop very slowly in boys. The results shouldn't be surprising: A "learning disabled" child who is also frequently "hyperactive."

We now have the opportunity, based on emerging evidence of sex differences in brain functioning, to restructure elementary grades so that boys find their initial educational contacts less stressful.

At more advanced levels of instruction, efforts must be made to develop teaching methods that incorporate verbal and linguistic approaches to physics, engineering and architecture (to mention only three fields where women are conspicuously under-represented and, on competitive aptitude tests, score well below males).

The second alternative is, of course, to do nothing about brain differences and perhaps even deny them altogether. Certainly there is something to be said for this approach, too. In the recent past, enhanced social benefit has usually resulted from stressing the similarities between people rather than their differences. We ignore brain-sex differences, however, at the risk of confusing biology with sociology, and wishful thinking with scientific facts.

Response?

The question is not, "Are there brain-sex differences?" but rather, "What is gong to be our response to these differences?" Psychobiological research is slowly but surely inching toward scientific proof of a premise first articulated by the psychologist David Wechsler more than 20 years ago:

"The findings suggest that women seemingly call upon different resources or different degrees of like abilities in exercising whatever it is we call intelligence. For the moment, one need not be concerned as to which approach is better or 'superior.' But our findings do confirm what poets and novelists have often asserted, and the average layman long believed, namely, that men not only behave, but 'think' differently from women."

For garbage or for verse?

Katharine Whitehorn

LONDON — The latest from America is that the Episcopalian Church, tired of people divorcing almost more quickly than it can marry them, is putting young couples through a kind of assault course in marriage before it will let them approach the altar.

Wrestling the young lovers' minds with difficulty from the topics of sex, bridesmaids and matching towel sets, it insists that they attend at least six sessions of pre-marriage counselling. During this, they are, among other things, required to set out The Marital Row as practised in their own families — this distinguishes the sulkers from the plate-throwers, while there is yet time to draw back. And they must write down what they hope their respective spouses will do to make the marriage work.

The fascinating thing, it seems, is that, while the women meticulously write down specific things like "take out the garbage," "not stay late drinking after work," "tell me his salary," the men simply write out a set of romantic abstractions: "she will be loyal, faithful, patient, feminine." This enrages women, and leaves them confused too: "What the hell does he mean 'loyal?' " This confusion I am now about to resolve. I will tell you what men mean by these pretty little words.

Patience means a willingness to hold the umbrella over his head while he changes a wheel, and also involves not going on and on about fixing the wobbly table leg, as he is going to do it any year now. There are also specialist versions of it: Architects' wives must learn to wait up to 15 years to get their own houses finished, as he is always diverting the builders to a more urgent professional project; and those married to scientists or writers must learn to wait for half an hour for the second half of any sentence, if he's been struck by a new thought halfway along.

Fidelity means physical fidelity in the narrowest sense of the word: no steamy sessions in parked cars, no bed, no hand-holding, even, under check tablecloths in out-of-the-way restaurants. It emphatically does not mean any of the various versions a man might incline to himself, such as "faithful to you darling in my fashion" — coming home at weekends; "faithful, not in the trivial physical sense" — coming home every other weekend; or the various versions of "but of course it didn't mean anything" with which husbands who have been sleeping around for years are apt to start their complaints about wives who have fallen in love elsewhere.

Tolerance relates to the above, plus a willingness not to remind a man next morning what he said/did/fell over the previous evening after the fifth whisky. It may also include not making snide remarks about his sister's taste in hats.

Loyalty is seen entirely as a matter of defending him against her relations and denying any possibility that it could have been his car that scraped the long black mark on your neighbor's white fence. It does not mean a willingness to have her own old school chums to stay, support out-of-luck members of the local women's collective or speak up for her mother.

A sense of humor involves laughing at his jokes, even unto 70 times seven, though wives are allowed (like children) to complain afterwards if their favorite wording has been departed from. It is not taken to mean a hoarse guffaw where one of the children happens to score off Papa.

Cheerfulness, too, is a quality to be used with extreme selectiveness. It is welcome when he comes back from a business trip and, instead of digging in for the weekend, demands six more shirts because he's off again directly; it is what she is supposed to display when the children have played her up all day and he arrives home, switches over from their TV program, and answers all requests to play a game, Daddy, with a series of grunts.

Feminine means looking seductive, making a man feel ten feet tall and beng totally inept with all mechanical things; unless he is away any length of time, in which case all three qualities are supposed to go into reverse.

It's possible, all the same, that it is the men who are being more realistic, talking in abstractions, than the women who talk specifically. For anything specific can change. You want him to take you on business trips — he's pulled back to head office and stops having any, dammit. You marry a painter, who sleeps till lunchtime, and end up with an art school administrator, expected at his desk by ten. It's in your marriage contract that he bring you sherry in your bath — but that was before you went off sherry, gave up baths, and became self-conscious about your hysterectomy scar. And that is quite apart from the things that are all in the future anyway: You can only guess how a man will behave when he's retired.

Perhaps the Church had the most realistic formula all along: for richer for poorer, for better for worse. Failing that, they could try the words of explorer J. W. Powell, who said, "we have an unknown distance yet to run; an unknown river yet to explore."

Today's Markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was mixed in active mid-afternoon trading today.

Trading in Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd. resumed at 12:15 p.m. after a halt called at about 10:45 a.m. The company said it plans to make a public offering of about five million additional common shares during the week of July 30. The stock was unchanged at $31 by 2 p.m.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said re-designated and subdivided shares of C.A.E. Industries Ltd. will be posted for trading at the opening Wednesday, replacing the currently listed A and B shares. Shareholders on June 20 approved the re-designation of the A and B shares into common shares without par value and a two-for-one split of the common shares.

Among industrials, Canadian Occidental Petroleum gained 1 to $42½, Noranda Mines 1 to $50⅜, Falconbridge Nickel A 1 to $65, Canadian Pacific ⅞ to $43¾ and Imperial Oil A ⅛ to $37⅞.

Asbestos Corp. lost 1 to $43½, B.C. Packers B 1 to $70, Federal Pioneer A 1 to $43, Texaco Canada ¾ to $71¼ and Woodward Stores A ¾ to $23¼.

Brunswick Mining and Smelting rose ½ to $10⅜, United Siscoe Mines ⅜ to $10¾ and United Keno Hill ⅜ to $14½. Highmont Mining fell ¾ to $6 and Placer Development ½ to $32¼.

Francana Oil and Gas was up 1½ to $16⅜, Numac Oil and Gas ¾ to $39⅜ and Amalgamated Bonanza Petroleum ¾ to $19¼. Total Petroleum North America was down ½ to $29¼ and Canadian Hidrogas Resources ⅜ to $7⅝.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed in New York, failing to make an early advance stand up.

The government reported this morning that the consumer price index rose 1.1 per cent last month, maintaining a double-digit annual pace in the rise of the cost of living.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, meanwhile, was meeting in Geneva to decide on a new oil price increase.

Analysts said such negative news seemed to be offset in part by spreading expectations of an economic slowdown, and an accompanying decline in interest rates. The bond market, which reacts directly to changes in interest-rate expectations, has been rallying lately.

Energy stocks dominated the active list. Occidental Petroleum dropped ¼ to $23¾; Tesoro Petroleum was up ⅜ to $17⅜; Amerada Hess lost ⅛ to $47⅝; Mesa Petroleum was up 2 to $61¼, and Continental Oil rose ⅜ to $37⅝.

The NYSE's composite index gained .05 to 57.95.

Montreal

Alberta Gas Trunk Line was up ¼ at $24⅜, CP Ltd. ⅞ at $32¾, Carling O'Keefe ¼ at $6, Consolidated Bathurst A ⅛ at $13⅞, Imperial Oil A ⅝ at 37¾, and MacMillan Bloedel ⅜ at $26⅛.

London

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 475.2, up 1.8.

Industrials gained but mines and banks were lower.

Cattle

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. at the Calgary public stockyards totalled 950 head, mostly slaughter steers and cows with a light run of heifers. Trade was moderate to local buyers. Slaughter cows met a good local demand..

A1-2 slaughter steers sold 50 cents lower with a heavy run of steers over 1,250 pounds discounted to $2. Slaughter heifers sold 50 cents higher with one load of high yeilding heifers at $75. Slaughter cows sold steady with sales to 61.60. Too few bologna bulls were on offer.

A1-2 steers over 1,000 pounds 79-84.80, under 1,000 pounds 78-80. A3-4 73-77.50.

A1-2 heifers over 850 pounds 76-78 with sales to 79, A3-4 73-75.50.

D1-2 cows 58-61, D3-5 53-58. A light supply of feeder cattle over 900 pounds sold steady.

'Ribbons of rail' from new plant

BELLEVILLE, Ont. (CP) — A new plant that can produce rails more than 260 metres long was opened Wednesday by Canadian National Railways.

Described as one of the largest in the world, the plant will provide continuous welder rail for Eastern Canada.

Across Canada, CN is producing more than 100,000 welds and 400 miles of track annually.

In a brief ceremony to open the new $7-million plant, A. R. Williams, CN vice-president, said the days of the traditional 12-metre lengths of rail, bolted together, are gone.

This plant produces heavier, stronger rail "welded into continuous steel ribbons more than a quarter of a mile long."

"As well as being made of new alloys that give it added strength, the new rail greatly reduces the need for frequent maintenance and is able to withstand the heavier, longer trains we are operating these days."

Business

OK Helicopters

First quarter results of Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. and subsidiaries were the best in the company's 32 years of operation, president John Pitts said.

The record revenues were the result of increased activity in the company's international operations which, unlike Canadian operations, are not affected by extreme weather conditions, he told the company's annual meeting.

The company does not release first-quarter figures.

Okanagan and its subsidiary helicopter operating companies now are working with companies involved in offshore petroleum exploration projects in nine foreign countries.

Pitts also told the meeting that the company's helicopter logging operations on the British Columbia coast are justifying the confidence the company placed in this type of business. By July, Okanagan will have three large heavy-lift Sikorsky S-61 helicopters on full-time logging.

Boots

After increased losses in 1978, Boots Drug Stores (Canada) Ltd. expects a better 1979 with the end of transition costs, president Jack Craig said Wednesday.

Craig said the $3.1 million lost last year came from renovations, advertising and merchandise changes for the Tamblyn stores its parent Boots the Chemists Ltd. of Britain bought in 1977.

Losses in 1977 were $2.1 million.

Craig said refurbishing the stores bought from George Weston Ltd. will be finished by the end of the summer. The Boots chain has 102 stores in Ontario and 60 in the West.

Chairman Alan Spencer said the British company is hoping to buy a chain in the United States. The Canadian operations are intended to be a cornerstone for expansion in the U.S., he said.

Houses 'like macaroni'

TORONTO (CP) — New houses should be sold like a box of macaroni, a food industry executive told builders Wednesday.

Developers would increase sales if they sold their products like any other consumer item, Glen Gratton, vice-president of marketing for General Mills Canada Ltd., told a meeting of the Toronto Home Builders' Association.

"You've got to plug the product," he said.

Gratton had some critical observations of housing advertising campaigns, saying they were under-researched, under-financed and badly designed.

Builders are often guilty of simply imitating other companies when "you should be trying to find out what the consumer wants."

With marketing research, builders could find their strongest market segments and use advertising dollars more effectively.

But he warned the product, not the marketing scheme, will eventually determine a company's success.

"If the public believes in you, they'll believe in your product. But if you let them down, they'll do you in."

Reactor sales pitch by Clark

TOKYO (CP) — Canadian officials hope that a personal appeal from Prime Minister Clark to Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira may help overcome Japanese opposition to the purchase of Canadian nuclear reactors.

Clark told reporters in an impromptu statement today: "I plan to indicate personally to the prime minister of Japan the very real importance to Canada of the Candu (reactors) sale."

Clark said the sale of the four reactors under consideration by the Japanese would be worth about $1 billion to Canada.

But he said the earnings form only part of the issue. The sale of Canada's advanced nuclear technology would symbolize to Japan and the world export market that Canada has more than raw materials for sale.

Clark said the Candu sale would be seen as an indication by one of the world's most important trading countries "of a willingness to accept Canadian technology and to begin changing the mix of imports from Canada to include advanced technology."

In addition, Clark said today he must be sure Canada's own interests are served before agreeing to give the Japanese access to the Alberta oil sands.

The prime minister told reporters he is not willing to invite Japanese investment in the oil-rich tar sands until strict conditions are met.

Clark said it was his understanding the Japanese hoped to invest in oil sands development only if they were offered guaranteed access to some of the energy potential of the area.

Clark said he had to be cautious in view of the projected decline of Canada's conventional energy resources during the next four years.

Earlier, at a news briefing Canada's ambassador to Japan Bruce Rankin told reporters that Japanese have already invested $75 million in the oil sands and are anxious to secure energy resources for the future.

Rankin stressed that it would be unrealistic to expect the 45-minute meeting between Clark and Ohira to result in a yes or no decision by Japan on the reactor purchase.

Negotiations for the sale of the four reactors are caught in the crossfire between opponents who fear the purchase of Canadian reactors would jeopardize Japan's own nuclear power hopes and government officials who are desperate to make plans for the country's future energy needs.

Ross Campbell, chairman of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. and former Canadian ambassador to Japan, has expressed hopes that Canada will be able to sell that country four reactors over a four-year period.

Japan now depends on nuclear energy for 11 per cent of its power needs — the second highest nuclear reliance in the world.

Rankin said in an interview the recent nuclear accident at the Three Mile Island generating station in Pennsylvania could be a deterrent to Canadian sales.

Seven trucks torched

homes go cold in New England," Deputy Energy Secretary John O'Leary told a Senate energy subcommittee. "We are prepared to take drastic action if it's indicated."

Striking truckers picketed Nebraska beef packing plants and New Yorkers worried about a shortage of meat. Wholesalers in the Chicago area said the shutdown is causing produce supplies to dwindle and prices to soar.

James Potter, 35, of Leesburg, Va., was shot in the arm Monday shortly after he drove his rig into North Carolina from Virginia. He was listed in satisfactory condition in hospital.

In Pennsylvania, state police reported two rock-throwing incidents on the Pennsylvania Turnpike west of Valley Forge early today, and there were some reports of panic food-buying in the Pittsburgh area.

The Levittown riot was triggered by a protest by about 100 truck drivers Saturday when a gas station at the busy Five Points intersection closed. A crowd of 2,000 was dispersed around midnight by police with dogs and billy clubs but on Sunday afternoon about 3,000 persons gathered again. They burned an abandoned car and a van, vandalized nearby gas stations and fought with 300 police officers.

Cut oil imports: Carter

with the average price now around the $18 level.

Otaiba told reporters prior to the meeting that he was suggesting an increased benchmark price, based on Saudi light crude, of perhaps $18.50 per barrel plus a ceiling price which could be around the $21.50 level.

But Saudi oil minister Zaki Yamani said that he was strongly opposed to such a system, believing it would spark a new economic recession.

Saudi Arabia indicated it would hold out for a benchmark price of $18 per barrel with OPEC members permitted, as they always have been, to charge premiums for higher grade oil, but with an end to the free-for-all surcharges.

Most other delegations, however, said that while favoring a return to a unified pricing system, they want the benchmark to be much higher — around the $20-per-barrel level.

That would mean a massive jump of 38 per cent above the base price fixed in March.

What could also happen, OPEC officials said privately, is that the ministers would fail to reach any agreement on a unified price and that the current system of wildcat surcharges would continue.

The consensus was that OPEC will raise the base price of oil 20 to 25 per cent — from the current official base price of $14.54 a barrel to between $17.45 and $18.17 a barrel.

A 20 per cent jump in world oil prices would add five cents to the retail price of gasoline, home-heating oil and diesel fuel in the United States.

European Common Market countries decided late last week to recommend that oil imports to industrial countries be frozen at current levels, about 20 million to 21 million barrels a day through 1985.

U.S. officials had indicated on Sunday they might go along with such a plan, subject to modifications that would allow flexibility to some countries. But officials said at a briefing Monday night that a five-year freeze might be unworkable because determining the future need for oil would be difficult.

Carter, spending his first full day in Tokyo, also conferred with Ohira about the Vietnam refugee problem.

An official said no decisions were made and that the refugee question will be a major topic discussed at the summit conference.

U.S. inflation rate climbing steadily

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. inflation surged again last month with an incease of 1.1 per cent in consumer prices, the labor department announced today.

Prices have been rising about one per cent a month since the start of the year. A 0.9-per-cent rise in January was followed by increases of 1.2 per cent in February, one per cent in March and 1.1 per cent in April.

If consumer prices continue to rise for the next seven months at the same pace as the last five, the annual inflation rate will be 13.4 per cent, officials said.

The Carter administration had hoped to hold price increases to about half that rate this year.

A labor department repo. said that increases in the price of gasoline and fuel oil were the biggest culprits in the May inflation rise.

"Gasoline prices increased five per cent in May, bringing the increase so far this year to an annual rate of 55.1 per cent," the report said.

TOWN TALK

Sheila McHugh found out that our neighbors to the south are pretty good Joes when it comes to the crunch.

Last week she faced a mammoth problem of finding homes for 26 Mexican students due to arrive here on Friday to take part in a two-momth summer exchange program.

She could find homes for only five.

The students are taking part in Intercambio International, a cultural exchange involving Canadian and Mexican students, started by a Mexican priest 25 years ago. Victoria has taken part in the program for 10 years.

Stumped locally, Mrs. McHugh got in touch with friends in the U.S. and homes have been found for all 21 students. That's really hands-across-the-border stuff.

Gas rationing, by necessity, is all the rage in the U.S. and weird and wonderful are the ways in which the precious fuel is allotted to travellers.

In some areas, an odd and even gas rationing system is in effect with drivers filling up on the basis of the last number of their licence plates.

But an Everett, Wash., marina owner has come up with what Town Talk thinks is a fair way to divvy up his gas supply.

His system calls for boat owners to get gas in an amount proportionate to the length of their boat.

If you've got a 21-footer, you get to buy a maximum of 21 gallons, a 10-footer gets 10 gallons and so on.

Might be an idea to try the same for cars.

GREEN
. . . old master

A tip of the Town Talk lid today to two runners.

First, a salute to Andy Green, one of the participants in the 5,000 metres Masters' event at last weekend's Y-Times track meet.

Andy was in fine form. That is for a guy aged 72.

The Canadian post office goes metric July 1, with letters and parcels to be weighed in grams and kilograms instead of ounces and pounds.

It will cost 17 cents to mail a first-class letter, which can weigh up to 30 grams and the rate up to 50 grams will be 26 cents.

Wicket scales in Canada's 8,000 post offices will also go metric.

The cost of the conversion?

A post office spokesman says it will be about $2 million. However, rates will not be increased.

Hughes was cited for stories on right-to-work legislation while Hume got the nod for stories on Indian land claims.

The top awards went to Tim Padmore, a science reporter for the Vancouver Sun and Keith McQuiggan of the Trail Times.

The awards ceremony was hosted by Calvert Knudsen, head of the integrated forest products company.

MacBlo picks the winners on the basis of journalistic initiative, quality of writing, contribution to understanding of important issues and general public service.

For her play Women's Work, set in the maternity wing of a hospital, Victoria playwright Joan Mason Hurley has been awarded second prize of $350 in the 40th annual Canadian Playwriting Competition sponsored by the Ottawa Little Theatre.

Mason Hurley specializes in writing plays with all-women casts. She is the author of Canadian One-Act Plays for Women, now in its second printing, which is carried by theatre bookshops in Toronto, London, New York and Amsterdam.

Some years ago her play Death Seat also won second prize in the same competition and is shortly to be published by Macmillan.

Who'da thought that the World Belly-Flop contest, a giggle event that sprang from the fertile if sometimes bizarre imagination of Tom Butler, the tiniest PRman in Canada, would ever catch on like it has?

Tiny Tom, whose lack of size does not prevent him from thinking big, says Super Flop V, to be held Aug. 4 in Vancouver, will again be televised by NBC TV on the network's SportsWorld program, carried on 212 stations.

The contest, if you didn't already know, sees gents who weigh a minimum of 250 pounds do belly flops into a pool. Judges pick a winner on such things as amount of splash, water displacement and personality (smiling or screaming a lot).

It is a sight to see.

Don't let the blue jeans fool you

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

But she's an integral part of the medical team that services the James Bay Community Project.

Along with two doctors, she has helped to examine and treat nearly 2,000 patients since the medical clinic opened in December, 1975.

Boldt is a nurse practitioner, or as she says, "a nurse who assumes responsibility for jobs previously seen as physicians' jobs."

How do you become one?

Boldt, a registered nurse, took her extra training at McGill University in Montreal. It was a crash four-month Arctic nurse course.

In addition to long hours of absorbing theory, she and her fellow students were constantly on call at Montreal General Hospital, putting into practice what they had learned in the classroom.

At that time she worked for the federal government and when she graduated was sent to Pangnirtung, a community of 800 on Baffin Island in the Northwest Territories. For a year, she and another nurse practitioner were totally responsible for the health of the community.

She recalls many anxious moments when bad weather delayed a plane coming in to transport a sick child needing more sophisticated treatment.

At the James Bay medical clinic, Boldt does laboratory tests, cardiograms, helps women with gynecology problems, prescribes drugs and performs other medical duties traditionally considered outside the sphere of nursing.

When prescribing drugs, she says, she tends to be cautious because the two doctors are responsible to the B.C. Medical Association for her actions.

Boldt sees the use of nurse practitioners as one way doctors can improve their medical practice by freeing them to see more patients.

But the program set up by the provincial ministry of health is not conducive to this.

Under the Medical Services Plan, there is no provision for doctors to claim fees for services carried out by a nurse practitioner.

In Boldt's case, the clinic is funded by the ministries of health and human resources.

The Capital Regional District also has two nurse practitioners on its payroll. One is on Mayne Island and the other at Port Renfrew.

Lavinia Crane of the provincial public health services agrees most nurse practitioners work at medical clinics or in isolated areas in the employment of some government agency. One, for instance, works in the Fraser River area, 50 miles from the closest doctor.

In 1973 and 1974, the University of B.C. offered nurse practitioner courses but these have been discontinued.

Instead, regular courses like the one offered at the University of Victoria expand their curricula to include some of the theory of a nurse pratitioner course.

Other provinces in Canada are making increased use of nurse practitioners to provide some sort of stable medical care in isolated areas.

Because of its terrain, B.C. is considered an area which could make good use of trained nurse practitioners where medical services are limited.

But it may be a long time before nurse practitioners become more than a rare breed in B.C.

Court fight looms over big centre

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Capital Region Board chairman Ald. Murray Glazier will urge the board Wednesday to ask the B.C. Supreme Court to quash a recent Saanich council bylaw approving a major shopping centre on the Tillicum outdoor theatre site.

Glazier said he believes the legal action is necessary because the Saanich bylaw conflicts with the regional plan.

The board recently asked the provincial government to hold up the shopping centre project until its impact on the region as a whole could be assessed.

But Glazier received a reply Monday from Municipal Affairs Minister William Vander Zalm indicating there would be no government intervention.

"He (the minister) understands the board's concern but he doesn't see the public interest as being affected," Glazier said.

The only recourse now open to the regional board is to refer the matter to the courts for a ruling, he added.

Glazier said the Municipal Act spells out that neither the regional board nor a component council of a regional district can do anything that impedes the realization of the regional plan's objectives.

"As far as I know the status of the regional plan has not been tested and it is important we do so," he added.

Payment sought for hall damage

A spokesman, who asked that his name not be used, would only say today the society will be "dealing with the situation."

He indicated some compensation will be sought but refused to elaborate.

"Enough has already been said," he said.

Society members themselves called in the press to take pictures and report on the damage done last Saturday in the aftermath of a grad party organized by students of Claremont.

Victim, driver blamed by jury in road death

A 20-year-old city man who died after being knocked down by a car on the Trans-Canada Highway near Helmcken May 5 and the driver of the car that struck him were both to blame, a coroner's jury ruled Monday night.

The jury found fault with Brent Ross Lloyd Eldridge, 207-1243 Bay, for walking on the highway while intoxicated.

The jury also said the driver, Dennis Keith Boyd, 20, of 806 Stanehill Place, in Metchosin, should share the blame because he was driving without using high beams, was tired, not fully responsive, and failed to drive with caution knowing his speedometer was not working.

Eldridge died in Victoria General Hospital at about 3:30 a.m., a half hour after the accident.

Testimony given during the inquest showed Eldridge had been at a party earlier in the evening and was crossing the highway about 500 metres north of Helmcken with a friend, Kenneth Wilde, 20, of 3139 Glasgow.

Wilde made it to the other side but Eldridge was struck by the car as he stepped from the concrete divide in the centre of the highway.

Station attack baffles Glazier

The E & N Steering Committee Monday came out in opposition to Glazier's plan, saying the proposed site at the foot of Pandora near the Johnson Street bridge is inadequate.

Steering committee head John Cooper said Glazier's location, which has been tentatively endorsed by Via Rail, isn't suitable as a multi-transportation terminal where bus, air and rail services could link.

But Glazier says he's never suggested the Pandora site as a location to serve the various transportation systems.

"It's not now and it never was proposed as anything like that," said Glazier. "It's a downtown terminal — period."

Glazier attacked Cooper for misleading people and said the committee's stand baffles him.

"I've always tried to point out that the downtown stop is just that, a stop, and if there is a multi-transportation terminal (elsewhere) in the future, then so be it."

Glazier said a station just past the end of the bridge would be an ideal spot to let off E & N passengers because they would be within easy walking distance of shopping areas, carparks and local bus stops.

"I find it really very hard to understand why John Cooper is attempting to frustrate and delay the idea of the train coming into downtown Victoria," said Glazier.

Cooper's group has been pressing for a new station on a block-long parcel of land on Government Street.

Cooper said the larger site would allow for a sizeable terminal that could accommodate links with other transportation systems.

In a letter to Via Rail president Frank Roberts, Cooper has urged an in-depth study of the all the various locations in the city that would be appropriate for a new station.

He said such a study is needed to determine intermodal suitability for tomorrow's integrated public transportation system.

Glazier said Via Rail spokesmen assured him in meetings last week that they want to move the station closer to town and that they favor the Pandora site.

NEW MEMBER CLUBS SIT IN ON FIRST NHL MEETINGS

Under-age draft a ticklish problem

NEW YORK (CP) — There were 56 people at the opening National Hockey League meeting, an unwieldy lot to say the least.

And before NHL president John Ziegler gets through counting hands of the 21 governors and their sidekicks when they vote, he may wish he had one of the UN general assembly's voting machines.

Getting things done during Monday's four-hour session was "an exercise in social dynamics," Ziegler said.

For the first time, the four new expansion teams from Winnipeg, Edmonton, Quebec City and Hartford, Conn., sat in as full-fledged members of the board of governors.

"I didn't have much to do," said Howard Baldwin, managing general partner of the Whalers who lost his other job as president of the World Hockey Association.

The governors scheduled an all-day session today, hoping to wind up their two-day meeting with a decision on the ticklish under-age-player draft situation.

The meetings, however, could extend into Wednesday.

The interests of the 21 teams are so varied that it will be difficult to obtain a two-thirds majority vote in favor of changing the bylaws that would allow lowering of the amateur draft age.

The universal amateur draft has undergone many changes since it began in 1963. The age of players subject to the draft that year was 17. It went to 18 in 1965 and 20 in 1967.

The present rule says that any amateur who reaches his 20th birthday in the calendar year in which the draft is held is subject to the draft.

Although the governors set Aug. 9 as the date of this year's universal draft, they were unable to agree on a formula for under-age players.

"You can't count on that," said Ziegler when asked whether the governors would complete their work on the draft at today's meetings.

"We have until Aug. 9. we can always change the date of the draft. We are not obligated."

Ziegler said he couldn't comment on the legal implications of embargoing the drafting of under-age players but the league would not make policy because of one player or one lawyer.

"We can't run our business based on one hockey player or one lawyer. Hopefully, what we're doing is looking for a long-range best position that the league should be in — taking into consideration all the laws of the two jurisdictions, Canada and the United States."

In other business, the governors:

— Approved the sale of Los Angeles Kings to Dr. Jerry Buss, a California realtor who purchased the hockey team, the pro basketball Lakers and the arena from Jack Kent Cooke.

— Awarded the 1980 all-star game to Detroit next February and returned to the old format, pitting the all-stars of the Prince of Wales Conference against the all-stars of the Clarence Campbell Conference.

Last year the all-star break was longer than usual to allow the staging of the first Challenge Cup Series won by the Soviet Union against team NHL 2-1. Two years ago, the all-star game was held in Buffalo between the two conferences.

— As part of the all-star exhibition program in the new Joe Louis Stadium in Detroit, Ziegler said the NHL will invite the Canadian and United States Olympic teams to play each other in a separate game.

— Approved a $6 million league budget for 1979-80.

Ziegler also disclosed that he and Alan Eagleson, executive director of the NHL Players' Association, will meet with Russian hockey officials in New York later this week to discuss the outlook of international hockey involving the NHL for the next four or five years.

Ziegler said the owners want to be prepared for the meetings they will have with the players Aug. 7-8.

Alexander joins Irish Wednesday

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

. . . and add to your program . . . No. 26, Kevin Alexander . .

Yes, it's finally true, Scoring star Kevin Alexander, formerly of Nanaimo Timbermen of the Western Lacrosse Association, now is a Victoria Shamrock.

General manager Leon Hall of the Shamrocks made the official announcemet today, ending months of negotiation.

Final arrangements for Alexander's transfer to Victoria were completed at a recent meeting. And Hall got Alexander's okay this morning.

The Shamrocks got playing rights to Alexander for an undisclosed sum of cash with the Timbermen also receiving the right to talk to several players on the Shamrocks' holdout list.

No other players on either team were involved in the deal.

The cash figure is nowhere near the original Timbermen demand of $23,000, but rather is believed to be about one-quarter of that amount.

KEVIN ALEXANDER

Veteran Ivan Thompson was excluded from negotiations by the Shamrocks.

Thompson retired temporarily earlier this season because of work commitments, but was a visitor in the Shamrock dressing room at a recent game and did not rule out the possibility that he may soon return to action.

Alexander has been a member of the Timbermen for the past two seasons after leading Victoria McDonalds to the Minto Cup Canadian junior lacrosse championship in 1976.

He finished second to clubmate Brian Evans (138 points) in the WLA scoring race in 1977 with 54 goals and 59 assists for 113 points and last year was again runner-up to Evans (146 points) with a league high of 85 goals and 50 assists for 135 points.

Because of pressure of business and other personal reasons, Alexander declined to rejoin the Timbermen this season and the Shamrocks have been dickering for his services since early spring.

The Shamrocks earlier signed two other members of last year's Nanaimo team, both former junior stars with McDonalds — Jim Lynch and Bob Cool.

The Irish also recently signed Kevin Kennedy, a Nanaimo draft pick from McDonalds, who had refused to report.

Nanaimo, meanwhile, signed Shamrocks' Ron MacNeil, an all-star and league MVP last year, as part of that switch and Jim Gow in the Kennedy deal.

Alexander will not play tonight when the Shamrocks travel to Vancouver to meet Burrards, but he is expected to be in uniform when the Rocks host Coquitlam Adanacs at Memorial Arena, Wednesday.

Baseball waiver system no mystery to Jackson

REGGIE JACKSON
. . . asked to be traded

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees placed Reggie Jackson's name on American League waivers last week after the baseball slugger asked to be traded following Billy Martin's return as manager, it was learned Monday.

Although both the Yankees and Jackson declined comment on whether such a request was made, it was known that the player was not happy with the return of Martin, his longtime antagonist, as manager of the Yankees.

Two days before Martin was named manager, Jackson heard rumors that Martin would be returning to replace Bob Lemon as pilot of the World Series champions. Jackson told Yankees owner George Steinbrenner at that time he could not play for Martin in 1980 and then found out that management was returning Martin immediately, not next season.

Jackson apparently then asked out and was included on the list of seven names which the Yankees submitted to for waivers last week.

Waivers expired on Tuesday with Jackson and the six other players on the list remaining with New York.

The Yankees said Jackson had been "claimed by more than one club and was withdrawn from waivers."

"I'm not trading Reggie Jackson," said Yankees president Al Rosen, "unless I can get a Reggie Jackson in return."

At least one club, Texas Rangers, admitted discussing a possible trade for Jackson, who was major league baseball's highest-priced free agent when he signed with the Yankees in 1976.

"We had talks with the Yankees about Reggie Jackson but never to the point of saying we will take so-and-so or so-and-so for him," said Rangers manager Pat Corrales. "Al Oliver's name was mentioned and that's when we said we didn't want to talk about it anymore."

"It's no fun," Jackson said of the constant turmoil which seems to surround his dealings with management.

Jackson said he has been on waivers before and that the procedure was explained to him by Charles O. Finley, owner of Oakland A's.

"Charley told me I was on waivers once or twice," Jackson said. "He said it was a formality, that sometimes you do that to sneak another player through.

"Sometimes you have a lesser talented player who you want to waive. So you lump him with a bunch of others. The other teams figure, 'They're not gonna let those guys go on waivers,' so they'll just waive the whole group. And the one guy you really want waived is slipped through."

Included with Jackson on the Yankees list were outfielders Roy White, Mickey Rivers and Daryl Jones, pitchers Jim Kaat and Jim (Catfish) Hunter and utility infielder Fred Stanley.

Do players understand that asking waivers is often an administrative manoeuvre in the business of baseball? Jackson just smiled.

"This player does," he said.

Roy an efficient fireman

Manager Bill Bryk of Victoria Mussels is happier today and Roy Moretti should also be pleased over what Bryck has to say about the Victoria pitcher.

"I think Roy has an excellent future," said Bryk after Moretti Monday night came in for the second straight game to save a 4-2 win for the Mussels against Walla Walla Padres in Northwest League action before 450 fans at Royal Athletic Park.

The new fireman of the Mussels, Moretti came on in relief of lefthander Steve Hartery in the eighth with two Padres on base, nobody out and the Mussels nursing a two-run lead.

And he put down the threatened uprising just as he had done in his last relief appearance, Sunday against Bellingham Mariners.

Moretti got shortstop John Stevenson, a high San Diego draft selection, on a strike-out. Then Dan Gausepohl, who had singled off Hartery, was thrown out trying to steal second and designated hitter Aaron Cain popped up to end inning.

Moretti got the side out 1-2-3 in the ninth.

Emil Drzayich's hit a three-run homer in the first and left fielder Pete Rabassa went three-for-four and singled in Mussels' other run.

Starter Steve Hartery had a no-hitter until catcher Mark Parent singled in fourth. Hartery promptly picked off Parent and also got Terry DeSimone leaning too far off first in the seventh.

Doug Lulay homered for Walla Walla.

Mussels met Walla Walla this afternoon and will meet the Padres Wednesday night at 7:30 in the series windup.

Gerulaitis ousted

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — A man who describes himself as "an horrendous grass courts tennis player" has created the biggest upset in the first round of the world's premier tennis tournament.

Pat DuPre, a 25-year-old Stanford University economics graduate, beat fourth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis 7-6, 6-3, 3-6, 3-6, 6-3 Monday in one of three major surprises on the opening day of Wimbledon.

"That was my best ever performance on grass," DuPre said. "I have never done a thing on grass before."

Born in Belgium, raised in Birmingham, Ala., but now living in La Jolla, Calif., DuPre had beaten Gerulaitis a number of times as a junior.

DuPre's aggression paid dividends in the final set when he broke Gerulaitis in the first game and then attacked his opponent's serve at every opportunity.

New York playboy Gerulaitis stormed from the court after the match and refused to meet reporters.

The defeat of Gerulaitis left an easier path for John McEnroe, controversial 20-year-old new millionaire of American tennis.

McEnroe, christened "superbrat" by British reporters who have castigated him for his on-court outbursts, cruised to a 7-5, 6-1, 6-4 win over American left-hander Terry Moor in the first round.

Top-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden, aiming for a record fourth consecutive Wimbledon singles title, dropped the first set of his first-round match against 33-year-old Tom Gorman, but rallied to win 3-6, 6-4, 7-5, 6-1.

Two other seeds, however, were blown out.

Veteran seventh-seed Arthur Ashe, winner here in 1975, was beaten 6-4, 7-5, 6-3 by 23rd-ranked Australian Chris Kachel, and 10th-seeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland lost a five-set marathon to Bruce Manson, ranked No. 30 in the United States, 4-6, 6-7, 6-4, 6-2, 9-7.

Confident Legion tackles hot Runners

Holding a game in hand and trailing leading Richmond Roadrunners by six points, Esquimalt Legion can make big waves in the Western Canada Major Junior A Lacrosse League race tonight when they tackle the Roadrunners in Esquimalt Sports Centre at 8 p.m.

Runners, who tied Legion 13-13 on their last visit here, have been the league's hottest club of late, own a 9-5-1 record and hold a one-point edge over Burnaby and New Westminster, who are tied for second.

Coach Ken Alexander of Legion is confident his club is approaching its peak and the fact that the team will be at full strength should strengthen the Legion cause for tonight's important battle.

Boss loses to protege

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Bill Rodgers, 1979 Boston Marathon winner, was upset Sunday by protege Greg Meyer of Grand Rapids, Mich., who set an Amateur Athletic Union record for a 10,000-metre road race.

Meyer, 23, who works in Rodgers' running equipment stores in the Boston area and runs daily with his boss, raced the distance in 28 minutes and 24 seconds, breaking the 28:36 mark set by Rodgers last September.

Rodgers finished second in 28:56.

It was no contest between VI.90 Vicettes and Esquimalt Combos in Victoria Senior Women's Softball League action at Hyacinth Park Monday night.

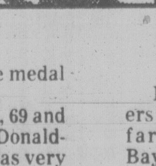
Glen Meadows to host B.C. Open in September



GOLF

Ernie Fedoruk

Glen Meadows will be the site of this year's British Columbia Open golf tournament.

Last staged on Vancouver Island in 1969 when it was played at Uplands, the BCPGA-sponsored tournament will be held Sept. 26-29.

The course has been committed, but some of the other details, including sponsorship, still have to be worked out. Glen Meadows pro Bill Penny confirmed the date Monday and said a minimum purse of $15,000 will be offered. Hopefully, the prize money will get to $20,000.

It will be a 54-hole tournament with a pro-am event teeing it off on the Wednesday (Sept. 26).

Donaldson was only two strokes back but Milliken started the last nine par-eagle while Dave went par-bogey and was never a threat thereafter.

Dale Aune and Geoff Dickson paced Capitals. Each had two hits, Aune driving in four runs and Dickson three.

Betting increase brings 'Reasonable happiness'

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Victoria harness-racing fans are betting more than they did last year and, although it is still slightly short of expectations, general manager Jim Keeling of Sandown Raceway says he can live with the increase.

"I am reasonably happy but not completely overjoyed," said Keeling of the 35 per cent boost in the average daily mutuel play in the first 22 days of the second standardbred meeting at the suburban Sidney oval.

Up until Saturday, the daily average handle for 21 days was $91,487 compared to $67,916 for 13 days last season.

The per-race increase is only 31 per cent but that is due to the fact that on some days last year there were only nine races. This year there have been full cards of 10 races on every day and the average is $9,149 compared to $6,969.

Attendance is also up, although only marginally at 10 per cent, with this year's average 1,276 compared to 1,157 last year.

Keeling had set this year's daily target at $100,000 or better, but now feels that a $95,000 figure may be more realistic.

Last year the final average was $80,700.

Meanwhile, on the track two new lifetime marks were set Monday.

Handle Carefully, a four-year old roan mare driven by Ernie Arsenault, captured the ninth mile pace in 2:06.4 and returned $6.20 while Here By Chance, a four-year old bay gelding, driven by Bob Boyd, took the sixth in a new best time of 2:07.3 and paid $4.90.

It was the first of two winning drives by Boyd who also scored in the eighth with Adios Tee Maral ($7.70)

Denis Linford also had two winning drives with Dante Tiger ($6.90) in the first and Ray ($11.50) in the fifth.

Open Range, a 10-year old brown gelding, has put in an early claim as king of the sprinters by winning his fourth in a row at the 5/8 mile distance while Donovan A turned out to be the overlay of the evening in the 10th.

Dropping down in class, Donovan A got away at about 15-1, returned $31.60 and combined with First Escape for an exactor of $299.40.

Racing resumes Thursday with first post at 5:30 p.m.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jeff Snedeker, former trainer of New York Jets of the National Football League and New York Cosmos of the North American Soccer League, has been named trainer of Milwaukee Bucks of the National Basketball Association.

Three clubs withdraw from B.C. junior loop

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three teams have withdrawn from the British Columbia Junior Hockey League because of financial problems, league president Ron Livingston said today.

Missing from the Interior Division will be Vernon Canadians while Langley Canadians and Delta Suns have dropped out of the Coast Division.

The departures leave a five-team Interior Division and six Coast Division clubs. Interior teams will play a 68-game schedule and Coast clubs will play 70 games.

Nor-Wes Caps, who play out of North Vancouver, and Richmond Sockeyes are new teams joining Nanaimo Clippers, Bellingham Blazers, Abbotsford Flyers and Chilliwack Colts in the Coast Division.

Battlestar Galactica's crash no jolt for Lorne Greene

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Television's Battlestar Galactica may have crashed, but it didn't bring its commander — Lorne Greene — down with it.

The Ottawa native, best known for his 14 years as Ben Cartwright on the Bonanza television series, has been at work recently on an array of projects, including a feature film, a television special and a radio series.

And as vice-chairman of the American Horse Protection Association, he travelled to Washington in May to appeal for preservation of the country's wild mustang horses.

Greene said in a recent interview he had mixed feelings about the cancellation of Battlestar Galactica, a lavish science-fiction epic in which he played Commander Adama, leader of a spaceship caravan trying to find planet Earth.

"I enjoyed the experience, I hated the hours, and I did not care for the direction the series was going."

The show, he explains, had originally been designed as a seven-hour mini-series. But four weeks after filming of the first segment began, ABC decided to make it a series and ordered 13 more shows.

"We had no lead time," he says. "We ended up doing scripts that would have been thrown out, but we had to get on the air."

This spring, Greene switched from playing the futuristic Commander Adama to a feature-film role in a new $4-million Canadian movie filmed in the restored town of Barkerville.

Klondike Fever, the story of writer Jack London's trip from San Francisco to the Klondike gold rush, stars Jeff East, who played the young Clark Kent in the recent Superman film.

Greene's role was RCMP Superintendent — later Colonel — Sam Steele, the man who helped keep law and order during the Klondike rush. Fort Steele is named after the officer.

"It was a fun role to play because it involved recreating an historical figure," Greene says. "I've always enjoyed doing figures from history because you can do research on them, try to get a sense of what the person was really like."

Some of his earliest work in the U.S. involved portraying such characters as Christopher Columbus, William Pitt the elder, and Sir Walter Raleigh on the You Are There television show, which featured Walter Cronkite.

During most of the 1950s, he travelled constantly between Canada and the U.S., trying to get as much acting experience as he could.

Ten films, three broadway shows and about 80 television shows later, along came Bonanza, one of the longest-running series on American television.

In 1959, Greene settled in Los Angeles, where he now lives with his wife of 17 years, Nancy, and their 11-year-old daughter Gillian. He has two adult children from a previous marriage, one of whom, Charles, has done writing for the CBC.

And at 63, he has no interest in retiring.

"I can honestly say I've never thought about it," he says. "I don't think of myself as aging. I still feel like I'm in my 30s."

Save a child: Anne Murray

TORONTO (CP) — Singer Anne Murray is asking Canadians to help save a child during the International Year of the Child.

Murray, honorary chairman of Save the Children activities during 1979, will be featured on new coin containers being distributed by the organization in stores, restaurants and other locations throughout Canada. Money collected from the containers aids children in more than 30 countries.

Child film stars: precociousness prevails

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

Scott's World

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Kid actors are a breed apart, each different in his own way, each with one foot in the adult world and the other in childhood, never really belonging to either.

Juvenile stars grow up in the spotlight which often is inimicable to normal psychological growth. Some survive to become adult stars. Some don't.

A thoroughgoing ham, little Gary was born with the natural timing and comedic instincts of a Milton Berle.

He is the only son of W.G. and Edmonia Coleman of Zion, Ill., some 60 miles south of Chicago. His parents are quiet and dignified. W.G. is an inspector for a pharmaceutical company.

The Coleman family makes its home in Zion but is looking for a temporary residence in Hollywood to accomodate their son's acting career.

Mrs. Coleman remains with Gary at all times. It is necessary to give her son daily medication. He underwent a kidney transplant 5 ½ years ago which has inhibited his growth. It is the only inhibition in the youngster's makeup.

During lunch the other day Gary did most of the talking as his patient parents lifted their eyebrows and shrugged their shoulders in resignation.

But the elder Coleman did manage to explain that Gary climbed out of his crib when he was only two months old and has been on the move ever since. He began talking at 13 months, entertaining his grandparents and everyone else.

"When he was five, we found an agent in Chicago," Coleman said. "We knew from the time he began to talk that he had a special quality about him. He was a natural entertainer.

"Gary did about 30 TV commercials. We brought him to Hollywood for the pilot of The Little Rascals, a Norman Lear project that didn't become a series.

"Then Mr. Lear took Gary into his office for a conference. Not long after that he signed Gary to a contract put him in Diff'rent Strokes."

Gary, wearing a Spider Man T-shirt, said, "Everybody thinks me and Arnold Jackson, the kid I play in the show, are alike. But we aren't.

"I'm more subtle and playful than Arnold. He's a little bit funny, but California people will laugh at anything."

His mother said, "You and Arnold are one and the same boy. Neither one of you keep your room straight."

"Arnold and Gary both have smart mouths," his father put in.

"I'll get you for that," Gary replied. "I like a messy room. I like junk. Sometimes I like acting and sometimes I don't. It's no fun going to work at 7:30 in the morning.

"And I don't like being famous or being interviewed. Being famous is no fun. It's too much trouble because I can't be myself. Wherever I go people pick me up and try to kiss me. Blah. I hate to be picked over.

Forest firms sweeten wage pot by half per cent

Negotiators for 120 forest companies in B.C. have increased to eight per cent from 7½ per cent a wage offer in the second year of a proposed two-year contract with the International Woodworkers of America, a union spokesman said Monday night.

However, the spokesman, who declined to be identified, said that Forest Industrial Relations, bargaining agent for the companies, would not move from its offer of a 75-cent-an-hour increase in the first year of the proposed agreement. Talks were to continue today.

The companies had opened negotiations by offering a 60-cent-an-hour increase in the first year and a six-per-cent increase in the second year.

The union originally asked for a $1.50-an-hour increase on a base rate of $8.16 an hour in a one-year contract for its 28,000 coastal members.

The spokesman said the companies also have agreed to increase vacations for lower classifications by one week.

He said the IWA favors an industry-wide pension plan because it would permit workers to move to different sectors of the province's largest industry without forfeiting their contributions.

The two other unions in the forest industry are the Canadian Paperworkers Union (CPU) and the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada (PPWC).

Talks are continuing between the PPWC and the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, which represents major forest products companies.

The CPU, the largest of the two pulp unions, broke off talks last week.

The talks have been marked by sporadic walkouts by workers on the coast. About 450 IWA members remained off the job Monday at MacMillan Bloedel's Sproat Lake logging division near Port Alberni on Vancouver Island and another 40 were out at the company's China Creek sorting ground.

Growers snub rules

KELOWNA (CP) — Some independent Interior vegetable growers are destroying the industry by circumventing marketing regulations, says the chairman of the Interior Vegetable Marketing Agency.

Bennett Hove said officials are more tightly enforcing a British Columbia Marketing Act regulation that says vegetables like tomatoes, cabbages, carrots and onions must sport tags from the B.C. Vegetable Marketing Board before being sold.

Some growers refuse to buy the tags, claiming the regulation is dictatorial and runs counter to the principles of free enterprise.

Bare-o-meter rising

VANCOUVER (UPC) — RCMP officers, who built their reputation by always getting their man and then tarnished it by opening other people's mail, face another tough challenge — the naked ladies of Wreck Beach.

Rising temperatures and lowered inhibitions have greatly expanded the number of sunbathers baring everything on Vancouver's seaside beaches.

Nude sunbathing is a time-honored tradition in Vancouver, but it has generally been confined to Wreck Beach — a narrow, rocky stretch of shore below sandy cliffs at the edge of the University of British Columbia campus.

But Wreck Beach has become overcrowded, and the sun worshipers have been spilling over onto other beaches, including public bathing areas around a headland.

Last weekend, when more naked bodies than ever were spotted on public beaches, the police started asking them to stay out of sight.

"Most of them did, but there was enough reluctance to indicate that we will have a real problem on our hands if we have to press the matter further," one embarrassed officer said.

"It's difficult enough for an officer to walk up to a nude lady lying on a beach towel, ask her to move along and still maintain his dignity," he said, "particularly as a lady in that situation can make it very embarrassing for an officer if she chooses . . . and many have been known to."

Real roundup follows rodeo

ASHCROFT (CP) — Rodeo cowboys saddled up for an unexpected midnight roundup Sunday night after about 20 bulls and horses staged their own version of the Ashcroft Stampede with a run through town.

As the animals munched their way across lawns in community, the RCMP rounded up several riders who had competed in the three-day rodeo to corral the wandering herd.

The animals apparently were only finishing the job they started Saturday night when a visiting bear caused horses and bulls to panic in their enclosure. The bulls broke several fence posts, but didn't escape. The bear ambled back into the woods.

Charge laid

DELTA (CP) — Charles Ted Dykstra, 29, of Delta, was charged Monday with manslaughter in the death of three-year-old Jamie Walker of Delta. The youngster died May 22, apparently of a ruptured lower intestine.

Presses repaired

COQUITLAM (CP) — The Columbian began using its own presses for part of its press run Monday after repairs were made on gears damaged last Friday.

Two folder gears were damaged during the final run of The Express, a paper published by striking and locked-out employees of Pacific Press which produces the morning Province and evening Sun.

The paper was printed by striking pressmen under an agreement Express officials made to rent press time in the early morning at The Columbian.

Waterbomb risk

QUESNEL (CP) — The provincial forests ministry will investigate the liability of waterbomber pilots who have to fly close to private property.

Hugh Freeman, spokesman for the air command tanker base in this central Interior city, said the use of a waterbomber in last week's $2.5 million school fire marked the first time such a plane has been called in to help combat a fire in a built-up area.

He said the waterbomber was travelling at 220 kilometres an hour when the pilot made his drop. Had he been a second late in making his drop, Freeman, said, the whole load of fire retardant could have fallen on private property.

Water clear

LAVINGTON (CP) — Water samples from Coldstream Creek at the mouth of Kalamalka Lake no longer show detectable amounts of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs), a pollution control officer said Monday. Environment Minister Rafe Mair declared a pollution emergency Friday after PCBs were detected in soil and water samples at the Consumer Glass Co. plant near this Okanagan community.

Joker acquitted

RICHMOND (CP) — A Moncton, N.B., school trustee was acquitted of a public mischief charge laid last week after he told the Air Canada check-in staff at Vancouver International Airport that he had a bomb in his luggage. Irving Hannah was given an absolute discharge after testimony that it was a joke that failed to come off.

STRIKES PAY for James Iwasuk of Edmonton, who made $50,000 selling silk-screened T-shirts during the 1977 strike. His mouth is watering for another.

Second summer strike for Alberta breweries?

EDMONTON (CP) — Eleventh-hour mediation talks were scheduled for today in an attempt to avert a strike-lockout that would shut down 95 per cent of Alberta's beer industry for the seond summer in a row.

Alberta's largest brewery, Molson's Breweries Ltd. in Edmonton, is the target of the first strike set for Wednesday. Also on Wednesday, workers at another Molson-owned plant, Sick's Lethbridge Brewery, will hold a strike vote.

Monday night, Alberta's beer-distribution workers were served a lockout notice by Alberta Brewery Agents (ABA). The lockout is effective 12:01 a.m. Tuesday, July 3.

The lockout was announced by ABA spokesman Gerry Lucas of Edmonton, who said with the imminent strikes at the two Molson-owned breweries and the repeated refusal of the beer-distribution workers to negotiate a one-year contract, the ABA has no other alternative.

The two Molson-owned breweries together account for 60 per cent of Alberta's beer production.

Parties in the dispute are the two Molson breweries and the ABA, formed by the breweries to distribute beer, and four locals of the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Softdrink and Distillery Workers.

The lockout notice was served on local 285 in Edmonton and local 288 in Calgary. The two locals represent a total of about 200 workers employed by the ABA.

Transit tax irks Cunard

HALIFAX (CP) — Canadian authorities imposed an "in-transit" tax of $3 for each of the 1,750 passengers aboard the visiting Cunard Liner Queen Elizabeth 2 on Monday, irritating her agents and skipper.

"If you want tourism, you don't discourage it this way," said Captain Douglas Ridley, who said the tax was imposed after his ship had already been scheduled into port here for a stop on a cruise out of New York.

The National Harbors Board imposed the tax but Ray Beck, port manager, disowned it, saying: "It was an order in council from Ottawa. We had nothing to do with it . . . no control over it."

Ridley said few ports in the world charge in-transit taxes.

He alluded to the tax at a ceremony later where he was presented with a biography of Samuel Cunard by Halifax Mayor Edmund Morris.

Ridley told about 100 invited guests he hoped the ship would be back but also "I hope we have no unexpected taxes."

Lewis Holmes of I. H. Mathers Ltd., the ship's local agents, said the visit of the ship brought a lot of money into the city and "there's no way it should have been imposed."

The ship sailed later for Sydney, N.S. and Bermuda.

Ridley indicated in an interview that Cunard's three cruise liners, including the Queen Elizabeth 2, could be nearing the end of the line due to the increasing cost of oil. It costs $16 million a year to fuel them at present, up from $2 million a year in 1973.

Fired waitress fights

OTTAWA (CP) — An 18-year-old student is fighting the National Arts Centre after being fired June 9 because she cannot speak French.

Connie Schwindel was not informed French and English both were required when she was hired for the job May 9 to work in the arts centre beer garden. She did state on her employment application she spoke both English and German.

Don Marriott, unilingual English director of catering at the centre, said in an interview the person who screened Miss Schwindel for her job "is no longer employed by the arts centre."

Donald Stephenson, another arts centre official, said the centre expected those conducting employment screening to ask the right questions of applicants "and that (bilingualism) is obviously one of them."

Miss Schwindel's job was taken the next day by the daughter of U.S. Ambassador Thomas Enders.

Eleanor Dunn, representative of the union to which Miss Schwindel belongs, said Monday there was no indication of anything wrong in this and that under a reciprocal agreement children of Canadian and U.S. diplomatic officials could take employment in the other country.

The union has lodged an official grievance against the arts centre on her behalf, alleging there was no reason for her dismissal.

MLA seeks prepaid law care

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Rookie MLA Peter Hyndman (SC-Vancouver South) Monday called for a special legislative committee to study the feasibility of a prepaid legal-care system.

The system would be like medicare but operate in the private sector.

The committee would look into allowing lawyers to advertise and investigate ways to lower the legal costs of purchasing a home, especially for first-time home buyers.

Hyndman, who is a lawyer, also asked the house to endorse the principle of the private sector making legal services more available and more affordable to the people of B.C.

In an interview, Hyndman admitted notices of motion filed by backbenchers seldom get full debate in the house, but the fact it will be at the top of the daily order paper as a constant reminder to MLAs will at least get the ball rolling, he said.

Already his motion is stirring discussions in caucus and in legal circles, Hyndman said.

There are two segments in society who get good, affordable legal advice — the wealthy and the poor.

Big corporations and the very rich can afford lawyers and the fees are tax deductible anyway. The indigent who run afoul of the law receive free advice from Legal Aid.

But Hyndman said there are millions of middle-class people who can't really afford legal services and can't write them off on their taxes.

Hyndman said lawyers are interested in further investigation of the issues he raised.

They are caught in the bind of rising costs yet are reluctant to raise their fees to keep pace because they are aware how easy it is to price themselves out of work.

A prepaid legal-care system is being investigated by large private firms in Eastern Canada.

Participants would pay a monthly fee and in return, be eligible for preliminary legal advice on a wide range of problems from will probation, marital difficulties or other legal matters that arise in most households.

There are two sets of legal costs in buying a house — the conveyance fee and the fee charged by the mortgage company lawyer.

The pair easily hit $650 or $700 for an average-priced home. And the money must be put up right at the beginning, Hyndman said.

"Ways must be found to reduce the cost," he said.

Allowing lawyers to advertise could lead to cheaper services and would certainly streamline the system, he suggested.

Racy and gimmicky ads such as "Bloss and Company has a special on car accidents. We're the best in town," would be prohibited, Hyndman said.

"I'm in no way critical of the present system," he said. "Many lawyer groups are trying to achieve the same end."

Drunk driver victims' payout increase urged

Coquitlam-Moody NDP MLA Stu Leggatt wants the provincial government to increase the amount the Insurance Corporation of B.C. pays to people who are crippled by drunk drivers.

Leggatt said the insurance policy is invalid if the driver responsible for the accident is impaired and under the law ICBC does not have to pay more than the miniumum $75,000.

He said the that while it may be ICBC policy to pay for compensation now, that policy could change. Payment should be made binding under law.

"We must make sure, before anything else, that the grotesquely and seriously injured receive adequate compensation under the law."

He also expressed concern about the impaired driver who could be made bankrupt under a new regulation which permits ICBC to sue to recover the money paid out for accident settlements.

BCRIC seeks listing?

FLEET LEASING

The B.C. Resources Investment Corp. is trying to get listed on the Toronto and Montreal stock exchanges before the house has discussed limiting the stock to British Columbians, a Victoria NDP MLA claimed Monday.

Charles Barber said if this is the government attitude, the Socreds should tell the NDP they have no intention of discussing the amendments to the BCRIC legislation slated for debate in the next few days.

One of the amendments the NDP has placed on the order paper is to have the new legislation retain the clause that gives British Columbians preference in buying the shares.

Now that the free share distribution is finished, the government intends to remove the British Columbians-only clause.

Barber asked Bennett about the stock exchange listing in the legislature during question period.

Bennett said he hadn't any knowledge of anyone from the corporation seeking listings but said he would look into the matter.

Write your MLA

Prince George South Socred MLA Bruce Strachan is urging trustees throughout the province to keep their MLAs informed of their problems.

Strachan, who said he will resign as chairman of the Prince George school board Dec. 31, said the frustrations facing MLAs and cabinet ministers are the same as those faced by trustees.

"There are not infinite resources, there is a responsibility to all the taxpayers you represent and the red tape as well as the statutes have a way of limiting your best-laid plans," he said in a letter to trustees throughout the province.

BEFORE YOU LOAD UP ANY OTHER WAGON, PRICE A VOLVO.

If you want a station wagon and you think it should offer more than just room in the back, you could end up paying a lot more up front for a long list of options. A Volvo 245, however, has very few options because it's well equipped to begin with. So there's a lot less to pay extra for.

An extraordinary combination of safety, handling, comfort and performance in a '79 Volvo wagon is standard equipment. So are the amenities that make driving even more pleasurable. Like orthopedically designed reclining bucket seats. 12-outlet ventilation. Electric rear window defroster. Tinted glass. Rear window washer/wiper. And much more.

So before you buy any wagon, see a Volvo dealer and price a Volvo first. You'll find a '79 Volvo already filled with the things you want in a wagon before you buy it. So you'll be able to afford to put something inside after you drive it home. VOLVO

Before the judge

His comic book collection is still intact but Richard Pilotte will be out of circulation for the next seven days.

Defence lawyer Jasper Bomhoff told Judge Harold Alder in provincial court Monday that Pilotte, 20, of 2540 Quadra, would have trouble paying a fine on a wilful damage charge but his comic collection could be sold to raise money.

The judge didn't think a fine was enough and sent the first-time offender to jail for seven days after he pleaded guilty. The Crown entered a stay of proceedings on a second charge of breaking, entering and theft.

Pilotte was also given six months probation and ordered to pay Robert Wright $223.42 for damage done during a drinking spree at the Oak Bay Marina on the night of April 21.

The judge described Pilotte's actions as senseless, saying there is "too much of this going on."

"If you can't act any better than that, don't drink," he told Pilotte.

A Metchosin man was asked by Alder why, if he found the telecommunication lines so interesting along the E & N railway in Goldstream Park, he didn't become a lineman instead of stealing the copper wire?

Elbert Conibear, 18, of 644 Latoria, who was already serving a six-month sentence imposed last month, was given nine months concurrent after pleading guilty to theft of wire cut on four occasions in January.

The court was told Conibear sold the wire for $50 to $75 each time.

A 37-year-old man who went on a hit-and-run spree along several downtown blocks June 19 was sentenced to a total of six months in jail after pleading guilty to two charges of leaving the scene of an accident as well as charges of refusing to take a breath test, driving while impaired and driving while suspended.

John Malcolm Nelson, 843 Craigflower, was given two concurrent sentences of 30 days after pleading guilty to an assault charge laid by his common-law wife and driving while suspended.

Franciskus Smit, 19, of 2622 Sunderland, was sentenced to six days in prison to be served on three consecutive weekends after he pleaded guilty to driving while suspended. The charge was laid after a May 5 accident.

Brentwood Sports Fishing Cannery Ltd., 7054 Brentwood, pleaded not guilty to a charge laid under the federal fisheries act of selling sport-caught salmon. The trial was set for Oct. 30.

Judge Alder set Oct. 31 for the preliminary hearing into the arson charge against a Canadian Forces man laid following a $20,000 fire June 16 in his Florence Lake Road mobile home.

John Davidson, 32, is free on $1,000 bail.

Fined on drinking-driving charges were: David Keene, 22, of 7102 Brentwood, $300; Alan Brunt, 27, of 6 Haywood Heights, $400; Steven Wowchuk, 44, of 607 Rainer, $600.

Print forgery eliminated by eight factors: sergeant

No special effort was made to determine whether a fingerprint found at the scene of last year's Mother's Day murder was a forgery, a B.C. Supreme Court jury was told Monday.

But Crown witness Sgt. Pat Braiden, an identification expert, said he considered the print in the light of eight recognized points that could by themselves point to forgery, or a print transferred from another surface.

He testified at the sixth day of the trial of Tommy Ross Jr., 20, of Los Angeles, who is charged with first-degree murder of Janice Forbes, 26, in her apartment at 1017 Queens on May 14 last year.

Braiden was called to be re-examined after testifying about finding the fingerprint on the curved handle of a green teapot. He said its location was consistent with a person holding the pot in his right hand.

Defence counsel Douglas Christie suggested none of the eight identification factors referred to in a textbook on fingerprinting had any validity unless the specimen print was examined before being developed to make them easier to analyse.

Braiden said he had not taken that step before developing the teapot print by dusting with a powder.

He agreed with Crown counsel Richard Law that taken together, the points would eliminate the possibility of forgery.

Sgt. Einar Hemstad told jurors and Mr. Justice Alan Macfarlane he went to Forbes' suite at 4:50 p.m. May 14. He stood near the bedroom doorway and made notes of his observations.

The dead woman was clothed and lay beside her bed bound by a piece of cloth or clothing with hands behind her back and one end knotted around her neck. The other end was tied to an ankle.

Hemstad saw a bikini top lying on the adjoining balcony and the matching bottom on the bedroom floor.

He also found a Mother's Day card in the apartment.

Photographs of the apartment and contents were taken and produced in evidence.

The detective returned to the apartment the following day and again June 10 with Det. Doug Richardson, John and Penny Forbes and the dead woman's children, Kelly and Steven Forbes.

The children were asked to say if they noticed anything that was moved, missing or did not belong in the apartment.

Hemstad said Kelly pointed toward a diningroom table and window. Hemstad saw a green teapot on a dresser.

The girl said her mother's teapot was missing, and explained that it had been used to keep money in.

Then she pointed to a lid on the table and said, "Here's the top for it," Hemstad said.

Braiden took the teapot over to the table and dusted it with fingerprint powder, the officer said.

Case awarded $265,000 job

A Victoria firm has won a federal contract to design a new marine environment control system for oceanographic research in Saanich Inlet.

Work has begun at Case Existological Laboratories Ltd. on a $265,000 project that will allow scientists to capture an area of the ocean floor, the column of water over it, and part of the atmosphere above within a single enclosure moored in depths up to 75 feet.

Vice-president Marvin Fallis said the concept is based on the CEPEX project, also designed by Case Laboratories, which concluded a six-year program this year on the inlet. The Controlled Ecosystem Pollution Experiment consisted of three plastic bags with closed lower ends suspended from flotation rings anchored to the bottom to a depth of 90 feet.

That program, in co-operation with the Institute of Ocean Sciences and the University of B.C., was funded by the U.S. National Science Foundation, whose support ended this year.

The new units will resemble the CEPEX arrangement and will use flotation rings salvaged by IOS from CEPEX. There will be three flexible units of varying size up to 10 metres diameter. They will be designed to be used to capture the water column by itself, the benthic floor itself or the first layer of atmosphere above; or in combinations of all three.

100 district scouts to attend jamboree

About 100 Boy Scouts from 11 troops in Victoria, Sidney, Colwood and Sooke will take part in a jamboree at Douglas Lake July 8-14.

They will be among 2,000 scouts from across Canada and the U.S. who will attend the Big Country Adventure Jamboree, one of the largest single events for children during the International Year of the Child.

Plans for the jamboree have been under way for almost two years. A large canvas city will be set up on range country between Kamloops, Merritt and Vernon.

The jamboree community, centred on Rush Lake, will have its own water system, bank, newspaper, post office, medical services, telephone system, beach and radio system (VE7 JAM).

Home-office limits eyed

Existing licences meeting Oak Bay zoning bylaws would continue as non-conforming uses in single-family residential zoning, but these would disappear with time.

The bylaw also separates such public buildings as the recreation centre from single-family zoning.

Council referred to A committee a situation it had never encountered before, according to acting mayor Ald. Doug Watts.

Council received a petition from 11 residents in the area of 2639 Currie asking that the business licence of design engineer Erik Hoel Ltd. be revoked.

Their request was based on the fact that Hoel apparently lives at Brentwood, the property is not zoned for business, neighbors were not consulted prior to a licence being issued, parking of three to six cars and a truck bearing the company name in front of the property restricts parking for residents, the residence has been allowed to deteriorate and is increasingly used as a hang-out for friends of younger members of the family.

It is also an encroachment by the commercial sector on the area's single-family status, the petition said.

"I would think it would be a matter to go into in some detail," Watts said.

Aldermen rejected an effort by Ald. Isobel Craig to have council reconsider a recreation commission proposal to turn the curling rink into a flea market for its otherwise idle summer months.

Council considered previously that such a venture would not be in keeping with Oak Bay, but Craig pointed out a successful market had been flourishing in an Oak Bay church hall. Ald. Shirley Dowell thought a "giant garage sale" was an inspired use of the curling rink.

Units cut back in subdivision

Slight revisions to the proposed subdivision of an old Cubbon Drive estate were described to Oak Bay council Monday by developer Robert L. Peden before the scheme was referred for further consideration by committee.

Peden said Bowker Place Estates had reduced the scale from seven units to six, provided front and side setbacks and two entrances — from Wilmot Place and from Cubbon, both cul de sacs.

Each unit would have 1,800 square feet on one or two levels and have 40-foot frontage and 40 per cent site coverage erected under strata title legislation. There would be a double garage or parking space for two cars per unit.

Selling price of each unit would be at least $100,000, perhaps $125,000, Peden said.

Acting mayor Ald. Doug Watts thought that before decisions are made about the existing house it "may be wise to have the heritage advisory committee look at the building," which was designed by "a fairly distinguished architect."

Peden said he had considered the possibility of redeveloping the old house, which is divided into apartments, and noted that there are fire marshal's orders against the building. But because of the cost he said he would have to have some assurance from council that he would be given some consideration such as a tax concession if he maintained it as a heritage structure.

Ald. Peter Bunn criticized the density, suggesting the people living on Cubbon have a certain lifestyle in their quiet cul de sac.

Bennett, Barrett sidestep debate

The question of a television debate between Premier Bill Bennett and NDP leader Dave Barrett has surfaced again but there seems little chance it will ever take place.

The two have in the past challenged and counter-challenged each other and for a brief spell Monday in the legislature, they came perilously close to something concrete.

But both Barrett and Bennett quickly started qualifying their positions, virtually ruling out that they'll ever square off on television.

Bennett said any debate would have to be this week, last 30 minutes between the hours of 6 and 7 p.m. and be on a network so it reaches his home riding of South Okanagan. One topic would have to be energy.

Barrett said a televised debate would have to be longer, people should be allowed to phone in, reporters should be present to ask questions and the topics should be wide open.

Police second again in shooting

Coming second in the annual B.C. sniper competition has become something of a tradition for the Victoria police department.

Three years ago when the competition, sponsored by the B.C. Rifle Association, was first held, Sgt. Doug Richardson won the silver medal. Last year, the prize fell to Constable Ken Weiss. This year it was Constable Doug Portentier's turn.

Competing against 12 other military and police sharpshooters, Portentier scored 555 out of a maximum 600. Only one point separated him from the gold medal winner, Sgt. Art White of Vancouver RCMP. Third place went to Lt. J. MacLean of HMCS Discovery in Vancouver with a score of 554.

Portentier, 28, a nine-year veteran of the force, is a counter-sniper with the Greater Victoria Emergency Response Team.

The rifle he used in the competition was the ERT's standard-issue long-range counter-sniper weapon, a customized .308 Remington.

Tea party's midway draws a hot defence

Suggestions that the midway carnival is not quite Oak Bay's cup of tea drew a hot defence at a council meeting Monday for the way volunteers run the annual Tea Party.

Ald. Norman Pimlott said it was unfortunate that one letter criticizing the mechanical rides and carnival booths had caused so much concern.

Subsequent remarks, such as by Mayor Brian Smith, suggested future tea party celebrations should have a more local orientation, perhaps by involving more parents and English-style entertainments.

"Condemning the Oak Bay Board of Trade is not the way to thank them for their work over the years," Pimlott said.

He said he was disappointed that people who had never contributed anything would complain of two days of events for which volunteers had put in volumes of time and effort.

Acting mayor Ald. Doug Watts said the trade board had done yeoman service and that the adverse publicity following council's last meeting was unfortunate.

But he also said it would be only fair to discuss the situation with the volunteer group.

Watts said the "carnival thing" has grown a bit too big and he hoped it could be scaled down.

There were also the volunteers to consider and the fact young people like the rides.

A cross-section of society must be catered to, he said.

Clipping basket held inspiration

We're into the summer doldrums. A time when it is very easy to relax but not so easy to do any constructive thinking.

That's why I'm sitting in front of my typewriter, at this moment, and looking blankly at the keys.

In hope of finding inspiration I've turned to the clipping basket on my desk. And from it I have gleaned a few thoughts that I'm going to try and turn into something for you to read.

Human Rights: You will remember the furore, back in April, when some members of the B.C. Human Rights Commission made crude remarks about women at a public meeting. And later, how they tried to keep Kathleen Ruff, director of the human rights branch, from speaking in public about human rights issues.

Since that time, labor minister Alan Williams, whose office is responsible for the commission, has been urged by concerned organizations and individuals to disband the present group.

Or, failing that, to replace those members who caused the trouble with men or women more responsible in their attitude toward educating people to a greater appreciation of human rights, and at the same time with thought of presenting a better balance between the sexes. (Right now the commission is made up of 10 men and only two women).

Two weeks ago Williams was quoted in both daily newspapers as saying he could see little wrong with the commission, and that he had no intention of disbanding or of chastising it.

He gave no reasons for that decision.

Latest news is that the Advisory Council on the Status of Women (with British Columbia representatives among its members and Doris Anderson, former editor of Chatelaine magazine at its head) voted at a meeting in Ottawa last week to send a letter to Premier Bennett protesting what it called "the frivolous and sexist attitude" of the commission.

It's a good try! I would like to think that letter, when turned over to Williams, would influence him and change his mind.

However, when you remember other letters and telegrams that have been pushed aside on his desk, and ignored, it looks like a forlorn hope.

Chastise may not be quite the right word to use in connection with the actions of the Human Rights Commission. Perhaps reprimand would be better.

Looking at the available facts, I would suggest there could be no better reprimand than to get rid of the offending members and to start over again.

Williams has the power. Why doesn't he use it?

Parking Ban: I'm all for Police Chief Irv Bailey's recent recommendation that parking be banned 50 feet north and south of Haultain at Foul Bay Road.

You see, I live on Haultain at the corner of Eastdowne and I drive through that intersection at Foul Bay Road sometimes two and three times a day.

On some occasions cars, trucks and even trailers are parked so near the corner you have to nose out practically into oncoming traffic to see it, also to make sure pedestrians have not slipped out behind one of those vehicles and are crossing the road.

So let me say, loud and clear, good luck to you Police Chief Bailey! I hope the powers that be are smart enough to accept your recommendation. It's good common sense!

Tzinquaw: It's extremely good news that this native Indian musical, last performed in British Columba in 1950, is all set to be revived by Cowichan Indian Bandmember Abel Joe, one of the original leading actors and sole surviving member of the first production crew.

I saw that unforgettable musical — the story of a people's fight to survive in the fact of starvation brought upon them by a killer whale — when it was presented in our Royal Theatre back in 1950. And I have never forgotten it!

Dances, singing and miming left an indelible memory. And I can assure you, if it comes here again, I will be among the first at the box office.

Canada: On this third day of Canada Week I'm going to conclude with a quotation from one of Governor-General Edward Schreyer's speeches, given soon after his appointment.

I believe it should be read over and over again by every Canadian.

"In the coming days and weeks we shall seek continued support from all who care about Canada — and they are legion — whether Canada for them is the land of their ancestors or the land of their choice.

"All these Canadians, this blessedly overwhelming majority in every province of Canada, will provide, with the help of Providence, a yearning for the preservation of one Canada that will not be frustrated, a vision that will not be denied.

"Canada remains our transcending objective ... For, whtever our origins, wherever we live in Canada, we have all contributed to the building of this country.

"Each Canadian, though unable truly to realize the greatness of the collective achievement that is unfolding, is playing his part."

YOUTH CLINIC

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker.

DEAR DR. LEVINE: I'm a 16-year-old girl who hates both my parents. I've tried pleasing them but failed. I've tried hard to get along with them but no matter what I say or do they make fun of me, mimic me. They are both over 55, very old-fashioned, and have closed minds.

My parents have given me everything but love. They have threatened to send me away but there's no way I'm going to a girl's school. I've planned on moving out when I turn 18, but I can't take it any longer.

I want to know if there are any services that would contribute to me if I moved out to get my education without them interfering with my life.

ANSWER: I can understand that you feel so desperate that you consider moving out. It's not easy living with parents when one feels, as you do, rejected, ridiculed and ignored.

Let's deal with the "easy" issue first. You don't mention in which city you live, but most urban boards of education and metropolitan governments now have special services for high school students who live outside the home. You could find out about these by speaking to your counsellor at school. I said easy, but I want to tell you that this is an extremely difficult course to follow. I've known many people your age who have moved out, lived on their own while attending school, and they've often found it lonely and depressing.

The other concern you have, your relationship with your parents, is more problematic. Of course I don't know them but I've often spoken to parents after hearing stories like this, and they are appalled that their son or daughter feels so badly, and worse, attributes the misery to mom and dad. Sometimes what we perceive is not exactly how it is. Other times, mothers and fathers have strong grievances against their kids, which account for their unpleasantness. Still other times, parents don't realize just how they're affecting their kids. For example, what you consider to be mimicking, they might see as affectionate teasing.

I am not trying to minimize your pain. But before you take steps to move out, you have a responsibility to yourself — and to your parents — to at least discuss it with them. Maybe the discussion will be a revelation to all of you. Perhaps you'll all decide to seek professional help. In any event, that should be your first priority. If this proves to be impossible, or fruitless, then you can consider alternative plans.

DEAR MR. VICHERT: I'm an 18-year-old girl. I have never dated in my life. I have gone out with friends in groups but not with anyone special. It's not that I'm ugly or fat. I'm very popular and above average at school. I'm the only one of my nationality at my school. My parents are prejudiced when it comes to dates and getting serious, but not about friends. I don't mind this and obey their wishes but I'm afraid that when I do go on a date I'll be a total embarrassment to him and myself, as I don't know how to act naturally, or even how to kiss him.

ANSWER: Naturally you would be worried about how it will be for you on your first date. Most of us, when we begin a new experience, feel anxious and a little bit worried. These are natural feelings for you to have so don't worry that you have them.

From the little bit you have told me about yourself, I feel confident you will do well on a date. You state that you are popular, well-liked, and above average on your school grades. I am sure that you will take these qualities with you on a date so that you will be sensitive to the other person and be able to talk intelligently.

You must also remember that a boy will ask you on a date because he likes you and, if you like him also, these positive feelings will help you feel natural, and will guide you in your behavior.

Kissing is one of those things that, if you think about doing it, it does'nt make much sense. But if the two of you really like each other, it will happen naturally and be an enjoyable experience. If you trust in your feelings and your good sense I am sure that you will not have any difficulties with your first date.

DEAR DR.POWELL: I have been going out with one guy for 3½ years, and for two of them we have been having sex. Every time I had my period, I'd tell my boyfriend we couldn't have sex. Could you tell me whether of not we should have sex then? Also, when is the best time to avoid pregnancy?

ANSWER: There are many taboos about menstrual periods and sex. In many cultures a menstruating woman is considered unclean and may even be isolated (put off by herself) during her period. There is actually no scientific basis for this feeling and many couples do have intercourse when the woman is menstruating. It is a matter of preference and choice.

It is the least fertile time during the menstrual cycle and the time when she is least likely to become pregnant. Her most fertile time is mid-cycle or about two weeks after her period, if she is perfectly regular and has a period every four weeks.

To find out more accurately about the time you ovulate — or produce an egg — you can use a method of birth control called the Symplo-Thermal method, or natural method of birth control. There are changes in the body temperature and in the characteristics of the mucus secreted by the cervix which can be marked on a graph. This is a very accurate way of determining the time of ovulation or of greatest fertility. You will need help with this method of birth control. You should contact a family planning clinic at a hospital in your area.

However it is difficult to rely on this method. You should consider using another method to avoid pregnancy. I suggest you make an appointment at a birth control clinic to discuss all the methods of birth control as well as to learn more about your body and how it functions.

Black Bears are found in every area of Canada except the extreme northern regions. On the average, black bears are considerably smaller than the other bear species that inhabit North America. Adult males weigh around 300 pounds, while females usually tip the scales at about 150 pounds.

The diet of black bears is very diverse. Berries and nuts are favorite foods: blueberries, strawberries, acorns, and hazelnuts being preferred. Insects such as grasshoppers and ants are also very popular with black bears. Although they appear awkward, black bears have been clocked at speeds up to 35 m.p.h. over short distances. This quickness enables them to run dowm small mammals and even birds on occasion.

For complete information on the black bear, contact the Scientific and Technical Publications Section, Canadian Wildlife Service, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0E7. Ask for their publication entitled Black Bear.

Drugs can harm an unborn child

YOUR HEALTH

by L. L. Coleman, MD

I'm pregnant. I'm in a class with 17 other women and we're learning the technique of natural childbirth. Of course, we all get to know each other very well. I was shocked to find out that one of the pregnant women sniffs cocaine. I don't know how many others smoke marijuana. This has never come up for discussion because the instructor knows nothing about it, and I'm not about to tattle. I would like to say something to them privately. I need your support for this — Mrs. V.E.L.

DEAR MRS. L.: I've previously written about the dangers of the drug alcohol (alcohol is a drug) on the developing fetus during pregnancy. Other drugs, such as amphetamines, marijuana, LSD, tranquilizers, narcotics and barbiturates, when taken alone or in combination, can do damage to the developing child and the newborn infant. It is believed that all of these drugs freely cross through the placenta and may be responsible for congenital malformations.

Heroin and methadone, for example, when taken by the mother during pregnancy, can produce addiction in the newborn infant. Far too many mothers, fearful of revealing their narcotic habit, may give birth to a child who soon thereafter will die because the baby's own addiction has not been suspected. When it is known that the infant is a heroin addict, the technique of gradual withdrawal will help it to survive this ghastly inheritance.

It is well-known that cocaine, amphetamines and LSD can be responsible for birth defects. The problem of marijuana is widespread. Many cases have been reported of congential deficiencies in infants born to mothers who smoke it.

Those who are enthusiastic about marijuana emphatically deny that it can be harmful to the unborn or newly born child. It is a sad paradox that the mothers in your class who are trying to give their infants the best physical and emotional advantage are, at the same time, exposing them to the hazards of drugs. It really doesn't make sense, in fact, when you recognize that family doctors and obstetricians are trying to reduce to a bare minimum any drug, even therapeutic ones, during pregnancy.

By all means bring it up for open discussion, at least among the mothers themselves. You can become a great contributor to the eventual health of their children.

Twice in the past two years I suddenly lost my eyelashes. At the age of 16 this is a terrible thing. Is there anyway that I can prevent this from happening again? — Miss E.E.N.

DEAR MISS N.:

An alergic reaction to cosmetics is the most usual causefor this condition. A number of cases have recently been reported of sensitivity to nail polish. At first it may sound strange that an allergy around the eyes could be traced to such a distant cause. Yet it does happen.

Sometimes, a local infection around the base of the eyelashes themselves can cause them to fall out.

The temporary loss of eyelashes has been noticed in some people who are under severe emotional strain. If you have reason to suspect this, talk it out with your doctor. He may recommend a psychological consultation.

By any chance, have you been using artificial eyelashes? Sensitivity to the glue is also a possibility.

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

Remarriage is debatable idea

DEAR ABBY: A reader asks, "How do I get back with No. 1?" Here's how I did it. My wife and I had been divorced for three months.

I missed her like crazy, so I sent flowers with a note, "I miss you, Baby. Love, Allen."

She phoned to thank me, and asked if I wanted to stop by that evening. I went. We talked and cried and hugged and kissed. Then I asked if I could spend the night. She said, "Not tonight. I have a headache." We both had a good laugh because that was a private joke between us.

We admitted that we still loved each other, and decided to try again. It's been 14 years and we're still in love. — LOVE STORY.

DEAR ABBY: I married the same woman three times! She had two husbands in between marriages and I had three wives.

The only ones who came out ahead were the lawyers. Take my advice and move out, cool off, separate if necessary, but don' get a divorce unless you're positive you never want to see each other again.— ALSO SORRY.

DEAR ABBY: I'm only a 13-year-old kid, but I've been through a lot. My mother divorced my father when I was eight. I can't count the number of times she went back to him because she thought it would be better for us kids. It wasn't. Tell the lady who divorced her husband to stay divorced until she can find a man who will give her a better life than her first husband. — CHILD OF DIVORCE.

DEAR ABBY: Tell SORRY, who is considering remarrying her ex, to forget it.

I married the man I said no to half a dozen times. He was the world's smoothest salesman. I finally said yes. He drank and chased, so I divorced him two years later. He wouldn't leave me alone, so like a fool I let him talk me into marrying him again. It didn't work out.

I'm free now. I hear he went to Australia. I hope he stays there. — STUCK TWICE.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a man who remarried my ex. It was dumb. I made the same mistake twice. — ROY.

DEAR ABBY: Tell SORRY not to remarry her ex unless the reason they split up has been resolved.

Gary and I were very much in love when we married. Our problem was too much family interference on both sides. After 10 years and three children, they succeeded in breaking up our marriage. We couldn't live without each other, so we decided to move away from both families and try again.

Now we couldn't be happier. — HAPPY TRANSPLANTS.

Mark underwent surgery to correct the problem, but returned to the hospital recently with a blockage one-half inch beyond the artery.

Dr. D. A. Gillis, the surgeon who operated both times, says the blockage was a developmental accident, not a result of a genetic defect.

Dr. Gillis says that although Mark will need ongoing attention, he will be able to enjoy a healthy life like any other child his age.

Soliciting rejected

Agape Force (Canada) Inc., originating from the U.S. and practising in Alberta, said it helped young people make a transition from "immorality, drug abuse and rebellion against authority . . ."

Aldermen noted the organization had no offices in B.C. and that there were already other religious organizations attempting to deal with similar problems.

A Kinsmen Club application to operate a beer garden Saturday in conjuction with the annual Sidney Days celebrations was approved by aldermen.

26 calls for firemen

Victoria firemen had a busy weekend with 26 alarm calls between Friday night and midnight Sunday.

Most were minor but one blaze in a home at 1374 Richardson Saturday morning resulted in an estimated $15,000 damage.

Deputy fire chief Mike Heppell said the cause of that fire was careless smoking.

In another fire early Sunday morning about $1,000 damage was done to an apartment at 1750 Chambers when a rag saturated with linseed oil spontaneously ignited in a clothes hamper.

EVERYTHING'S DUCKY for these young mallards which were brought to the SPCA after becoming separated from their mothers. Such accidental partings are not unusual for young ducks who eventually fly away after a brief stay with SPCA. Best advice if you should find a lost duckling is to keep it warm and call in the experts. Obviously, birds shown here can't be adopted. (John McKay photo)

Zeballos clinic talks

Dr. Kenneth Benson, director of the Upper Island Health Unit, will meet with provincial health officials soon to discuss the need for medical facilities at Zeballos on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Zeballos, a logging village of about 400 people, has been without a medical clinic since Friday.

The village had been renting a three-room house from the Nootka Mission Association, a religous group with headquarters at Esperanta. The village was notified that the home would no longer be available after there was adverse publicity on the condition of the building.

Dr. Deborah Brown and Dr. Arthur Harpur of Tahsis, who made weekly visits to the village described the building as a "hellhole" with poor plumbing and lighting and without storage facilities.

The building is also used by transient tree planters.

Benson, who visited the clinic a few days ago, will submit a report. He says Zeballos is facing a difficult situation. He says the report will deal with a total community health package with all aspects of health care being taken into consideration.

Monday's clinic at Zeballos had to be cancelled and village Mayor Cliff Pederson says efforts to find another location have been unsuccessful. He says the village cannot afford the alternative solution of paying for house calls.

He said public feeling is running high and villagers will be writing letters and phoning Victoria to try and get some action.

Cyclists collide

Operator of the motorcycle, Edward Coady MacGillivary, and his passenger Christopher Rhyno, both 19 and members of the PPCLI Third Battalion at Work Point, were treated for cuts at the scene.

The bicycle was demolished and about $200 damage done to the motorcycle, Esquimalt police said.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
4 ♡	5 ♣	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead — ten of spades.

Let's suppose that in a given deal your partner opens the bidding with one spade and, when you respond one notrump, he bids four spades. It is surely reasonable to assume your partner has six or more spades for his bids.

True, this is only an inference; in pure theory, he might have only three, four or five spades. Everything is possible in the abstract sense, but you should not start by assuming that your partner recently escaped from an insane asylum.

Applying this inference to the present case, declarer should decide from the spade lead that West is void of hearts. West surely would have led a heart if he had one, and the spade lead in the face of East's opening four heart bid is almost conclusive proof that West has no hearts at all.

When declarer wins the spade lead with the ace and East's king falls, he can also logically conclude that the king is either a singleton or part of the K-Q doubleton. When South ruffs a low spade at trick two and East shows out, all doubt about the spade distribution is resolved and South knows positively that West started with seven spades.

Declarer now draws trumps, learning that West also started with precisely two clubs. So, from all this, South judges that West started with exactly four diamonds and therefore originally had 7-0-4-2 distribution.

Accordingly, South cashes the ace of diamonds, overtakes the queen with the king and leads the ten of diamonds, discarding a heart. West wins with the jack and plays the queen of spades, on which South discards another heart!

West must now put dummy on lead with a spade or a diamond and, as a result, declarer makes five clubs. South does nothing marvelous; he merely puts all the pieces of the jigsaw puzzle together.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Indecision now could be a blessing in disguise. Accent on legal ties, secret agreements, prophetic dreams. Pisces Virgo persons could play significant roles. Make position clear. Check quotes, sources, hold off on direct action.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Obtain hint from Aquarius message. Gather data. Be a shrewd observer, an assiduous researcher. Accent on pressure, challenge, responsibility, intensified relationship. Special services grab share of spotlight.

IF JUNE 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a natural humanitarian. You strive for rights of underdog — people are drawn to you with their problems. You respond usually well during times of crises. Aries, Libra persons play significant roles in your life. December could be one of your most important months of 1979, a year featuring special changes, travel, a relationship that develops into something "serious." You understand intricacies of campaigning — you gain allies for a cause and you inspire others to stand tall for beliefs. You are on brink of cycle that will bring satisfaction, joy and profit. You are going to heal emotional wound and replace something that went out of your life six years ago.

$1.76M paid for Louis XV cabinet

MONTE CARLO (AP) — A Louis XV cabinet brought a record 7.6 million francs ($1,760,000) at the opening Monday of what may be the most important French furniture auction of the century.

The Heim Gallery in London made the successful bid for the ormulu-mounted marquetry corner cabinet from the collection of Saudi Arabian businessman Akram Ojjeh.

The first 60 of some 200 lots being sold by Sotheby Parke Bernet, brought about $6,780,000. The Louis XV cabinet, an 18th-century work by Jacques Dubois from a design of Nicholas Pineau, fetched more than three times pre-sale estimates.

The sale may exceed that of Lord Rosebery's collection, which brought nearly $11 million in May 1977.

Muzorewa parliament takes seat

SALISBURY (AP) — Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa witnessed the opening of Zimbabwe Rhodesia's first black-dominated Parliament today, facing a boycott by some of his rivals and a rebellion by his own party.

Police reinforcements patrolled the capital as the black and white members of Parliament and senators took their seats inside the building, previously the assembly of successive white-minority governments dating back to 1923.

Parliament was opened by titular President Josiah Gumede, who urged Britain and the United States to recognize the new government as representative of the bulk of the population.

Continued withholding of recognition, he said, is tantamount to support for the "terrorists," the black nationalist guerrillas who have been fighting for seven years to take power.

It was announced in Washington today that the U.S. State Department has approved a request by Muzorewa to visit the capital early in July on a trip that could include a meeting with President Carter.

The U.S. government's decision to grant Muzorewa a visa now and the president's studied failure thus far to rule out a suggested White House meeting is certain to stir fresh controversy in Africa, where Muzorewa's white-supported government has been strongly denounced.

The new Parliament, a 100-seat executive assembly and a 30-seat rubberstamp Senate, will begin its work Wednesday.

The first black-led government is already split and weakened by the breakaway of seven members from Muzorewa's United African National Council and a boycott of 12 of the seats by Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole's Zimbabwe African National Union.

The rebellion and the boycott mean Muzorewa will head a government without the two-seat majority he held with his 51 elected members.

With 44 of the 100 seats, he will have to rely on at least six of the other members of the so-called government of national unity to pass laws.

This means that the 28 white legislators in the assembly wield a balance of power in a government that is seeking international recognition as a black-majority administration.

Refugees land despite blockade

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — Two boatloads of Vietnamese refugees broke through a naval blockade and landed on the Malaysian coast today, but the government said it will send them back out to sea as it did almost 13,000 others in the last week.

A small wooden boat carrying 96 refugees landed on the east central coast of the Malay Peninsula Monday night and another boat with 21 aboard landed in Kota Kinabalu, on the northern coast of Borneo.

Officials said they will be given food, fuel and other necessities, then towed back out into the South China Sea.

A foreign ministry spokesman told Parliament on Monday that a task force patrolling the coast has sent 60 boats with 12,966 Indochinese aboard back to international waters since the government tightened its anti-refugee policy on June 18. He said about 330 boats carrying 55,000 refugees have been expelled from Malaysia this year.

There has been no information on the fate of those sent back out to sea, but relief officials say thousands of the "boat people" drown when their overcrowded, unseaworthy craft sink.

Malaysia has 60,000 refugees in island camps awaiting transfer to other countries and more than 15,000 others scattered along the beaches of the east coast. The government threatened earlier this month to expel all of them, but after an international outcry said they could stay until other countries accept them but no new arrivals will be accepted.

Deputy Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamed told reporters Western states could stop the flow of refugees if they announced they would not accept any more.

"Third countries should inform the Vietnamese people that they would not be accepted by any country if they run out," he said.

World Vision, an international Christian organization with headquarters in the United States, announced it is sending a ship from Singapore into the South China Sea to provide medical and emergency care for refugees. Workmen will be on board to repair refugee boats, a spokesman said.

About 275,000 other Indochinese refugees are in Thailand, Hong Kong and Indonesia, and those countries like Malaysia say they cannot provide jobs and homes for them.

A special Vietnamese envoy, Mai Van Bo, was due in Malaysia from Jakarta Wednesday to discuss the refugee situation. The Indonesians told him the other Southeast Asian states want his government to take concrete steps to ease the outpouring of refugees.

Japan to ban whale imports

TOKYO (Reuter) — Japan will ban imports of whales and whale products from countries outside the 21-nation International Whaling Commission from July 5, the ministry of international trade and industry said today.

The ban, to be enforced before a commission general meeting in London starting July 9, follows resolutions at meetings of the commission last year to restrict imports from non-members.

Japan, which relies on the sea for more than 50 per cent of its protein, last year imported about 10,500 metric tons of whale meat from non-member countries including Spain, Cyprus, Somalia, South Korea, Peru and Sweden.

GARDENING
Jack Beastall

Although we have had overcast or cloudy skies and a few drops of rain here in the Victoria area, the strong winds have taken more moisture from plants and soil than the raindrops have replaced.

The hint I would leave with you today in regard to watering the garden is not to do it every day on the same piece of ground. When you water an area, water it thoroughly and leave it for a week or ten days.

It is impossible to state a definite period that should elapse between waterings, for it will depend on the type of soil and the amount of compost or other humus-forming material you have added each year to hold the water at root level, and the subsoil beneath, whether it drains easily or not.

The plants must have water, but it has to be deep in the soil where the roots can pick it up. Only seedlings can use surface moisture. To get water deep down means steady watering for possibly two or three hours.

As this water sinks in the days that follow, air is drawn into the soil behind it, and the air is just as essential to healthy roots as the supply of water.

As air circulates through the minute spaces between the grains of soil, the surface soil becomes dry. This is not an indication that the soil around the roots is dry.

If the surface soil is loosened by light cultivation a day or so after watering it destroys the tiny channels which extend from deep down right up to the surface, through which the water is drawn from below by the heat of the surface soil and evaporated into the atmosphere.

The loosening of the surface provides what is known as a "dust mulch", for it serves a similar purpose as a covering mulch in conserving the moisture already in the soil.

It is not so effective on a sandy soil unless large quantities of humus are present down below, but it works well on clay soils. During a hot summer I am able to make one three-hour watering last from three to four weeks.

This balance between water and air in the soil is like the swing of a pendulum on a grandfather's clock, first to the wet side, then to the dry side, and the home gardener's job is to maintain a steady rhythm, never too far in one direction or the other.

To do this the gardener has to study the soil in the garden, build up its moisture-holding capacity with regular applications of compost, mushroom compost, or old manure, then do a little experimenting.

A regular schedule of watering is practised in public parks, on large estates, and in plant nurseries. A certain area is watered on a given day whether the sky is cloudy or clear, whether it is raining or sunny, and the result is better plant growth and a considerable saving in water.

As mentioned above, the fact that the surface soil is dry does not indicate the root soil is dry, nor does the daily watering of the surface mean there is any water in the soil at root level.

Spreading a little water over the surface every day is just a waste of water and accounts for the many complaints of high water bills and poor plant growth.

The time to water is early in the morning. The coolest temperatures in the 24 hour day are just across sunrise, and the soil and plants are at their lowest temperature at that time, while the water in the mains is considerably warmer than the air temperature.

Growth is not inhibited by morning watering as it is when cool water is poured on hot plants and soil in the evening.

WASHINGTON (WP) — Sen. Edward Kennedy's 2-to-1 lead over President Carter in public opinion polls appears to exaggerate his potential strength as a presidential candidate, a Washington Post poll indicates.

Much of Kennedy's support, the poll suggests, comes from people who hold positions on issues that are almost diametrically opposed to the positions held by the Massachusetts senator.

If he became a candidate, a good bit of that support could be expected to disappear. Nonetheless, Kennedy would still hold a sizable lead over the president at the outset of any contest between them.

Twenty-three per cent of those polled supported Carter and 46 per cent supported Kennedy. But Kennedy was favored by an even higher percentage of people who want to cut taxes, get tough with the Soviet Union and slow down the pace of integration.

Kennedy, an outspoken liberal, also outpolled Carter by 22 percentage points among those who called themselves conservative Democrats.

Another indication that Kennedy's popularity is unrelated to issues came over the question of a government-sponsored health program. Kennedy, the author of legislation for national health insurance, polled as well among people who opposed such a program as among those who favor one. "Right now Kennedy has the best of all worlds," said Robert Teeter, a respected Republican pollster. "He can pick his issues. He can do it without answering any of the negatives. In a campaign it would be a different situation."

Kennedy has consistently said he won't be a candidate for the 1980 Democratic nomination if Carter runs. But polls by George Gallup, Louis Harris and other organizatons have shown him to be favored over Carter about 2-to-1, a finding similar to that of the new Washington Post poll.

In addition to finding that Kennedy gets support from people who seem opposed to him on issues, the Post poll found Kennedy benefits from a backlash against Carter's handling of the nation's economic and energy problems. More than half of the Democrats interviewed in the survey gave the president a negative rating on both counts.

Kennedy was favored 82 to 12 per cent over Carter by those who don't like the way the president has handled the economy, and by 79 to 16 per cent by those who disapprove of his energy policies.

Carter outpolled Kennedy 60 to 39 per cent among the minority who like the president's energy programs, and by 61 to 37 per cent among those who approve of the way he has handled the economy.

Carter's perceived successes in foreign policy, however, haven't helped him much, according to the Post poll. It shows that 62 per cent of those interviewed think he is doing a good job in this area, but this same group favors Kennedy as a presidential candidate, 55 to 43 per cent.

The president has similar problems among those who think highly of his performance. Among those who give Carter an overall job rating of seven on a scale where 10 is ideal, only 30 per cent favor his reelection over Kennedy.

Report cards 'meaningless' teachers' records different

Report cards are meaningless because teachers use another marking system for their own records, Greater Victoria school trustee John Young said Monday.

Schools superintendent Allan Stables called Young's comment a "revelation" and said he will look into the charge.

Young said report cards don't accurately reflect a student's performance because teachers use another evaluation process for their permanent files.

Trustee Susan Brice said separate marking systems were used when she worked as an elementary school teacher several years ago.

Brice said during a telephone conversation today report cards and permanent files do not differ dramatically.

But it is common practice at the elementary level to send home verbal reports but evaluate students by letter grade on the permanent file cards.

But Brice said she has not been teaching for seven years and the process might have changed.

Because of the recent emphasis on the core curriculum, more elementary schools are starting to send letter grades home to parents instead of written comments.

All permanent files are available to students and parents, Brice said.

Young, who told the board he spent 20 years as a teacher and principal, said two seperate evaluation procedures are used at both elementary and secondary levels.

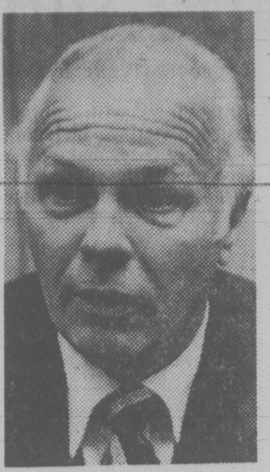
The remarks were made during a discussion of new report card designed by Marigold elementary staff.

Brice said any discrepancies between progress reports for parents and a permanent files are because teachers have to "comply with a different set of options."



STABLES

Trustees to yield on 5-year budget

Greater Victoria school board Monday agreed to take the advice of schools superintendent Allan Stables and submit a five-year budget projection to the education ministry.

Stables said the ministry could legally withhold grants if the board refuses again this year to hand in the projection.

Last year this district was the only one in the province to refuse the ministry's request for budget forecasts.

The board is putting itself in a risky postion, Stables warned, because the ministry's directive is a legitimate request for planning information.

He said his administrative staff would have no trouble preparing the information.

Ignoring the request isn't worth the worry of wondering if the ministry will retaliate by cutting funding.

Stables said the district hasn't received any threats from the ministry.

Cabinet turns down appeal on reserve

North Saanich council has lost its bid to have 16 acres of property on Canora Road brought back into the Agriculture Land Reserve.

The provincial cabinet has turned down the municipality's request and has upheld an earlier decision by the B.C. Land Commission to have the property, owned by Donald Wilson, taken out of the ALR.

The property, immediately south of the Sidney border, is zoned for rural residential use on two-acre minimum lots.

Mrs. Wilson said today she and her husband haven't yet decided whether they will now attempt to subdivide the property.

However, she said she was elated by the cabinet's decision.

"We've been fighting four years to have this matter resolved," she said.

A municipal spokesman said some members of council had felt that the acreage could have been used for some kind of agricultural purpose.

But Mrs. Wilson said the property has no agricultural potential.

"The land was stripped of all its topsoil years ago," she said, adding that all that remains is a clay sub-soil which turns into gumbo in wet weather and dries up in the summer.

"We have trouble even keeping a small garden," she said.

Turgoose Pt. housing approved by committee

A major housing development at Turgoose Point has been approved in principle by Central Saanich council's subdivision and zoning committee.

Committee members Monday night recommended the municipality enter a development permit that would allow Canada Trust to proceed with its plan to build a mixture of single-family dwellings, townhouses and four low-rise apartment buildings on 28 acres of prime waterfront property.

The recommendation will be dealt with at the next meeting of council July 2.

Ald. George MacFarlane said the project, which would be phased in over a maximum five-year period, would result in about 300 residential units.

The development site is bounded by the ocean, Lochside Drive and Mt. Newton Crossroad and is now zoned for apartments.

If council approves the plan, municipal staff will then be asked to draft a permit outlining conditions for the development.

MacFarlane said the company has already agreed to dedicate three to four acres of waterfront property as a public park.

Bowcotts propose secession

A pioneer Central Saanich family is so fed up with the municipality's bylaws and building restrictions it wants to secede and join neighboring North Saanich.

Dennis Bowcott of 8349 Alec made the request Monday night to Central Saanich's subdivision and zoning committee.

Committee members rejected the move but agreed to look more closely into the problems that gave rise to Bowcott's complaints.

Ald. George MacFarlane said Bowcott is unhappy with the municipality's zoning bylaws which have foiled his plans to improve 40 acres of property adjacent to the North Saanich border.

Bowcott was unavailable for comment but his wife said today he had hoped to build a reservoir on the property for fire protection and livestock. The project would involve considerable rock removal but the municipality has apparently refused to let the family haul the rock off the property.

B.C.-made rape film wins award

A rape film made in Vancouver has won an award at the American Film Festival in New York.

Called This Film is About Rape, it was directed by Vancouver filmmaker Bonnie Kreps, whose credits include work for CTV and W5.

The B.C. Police Commission contributed $15,000 toward production costs and the project received other grants, according to Dorothea Atwater, rape prevention project co-ordinator for the commission.

Atwater said total production costs of $30,000 were offset by National Film Board donation of equipment and lab time.

Film content was developed by a group of police officers and members of Rape Crisis Centre who overcame philosophical differences to work together, she said.

It won second prize in the changing society category of the festival. More than 1,000 films from all over North America and Europe took part in the event and the rape film was one of five Canadian entries.

Atwater said the film was developed out of a need for a Canadian film that made women aware of the grim reality of rape.

"The most important thing about the film is that it reaches women and makes them think.

Dispelling the myths and misconceptions about rape and giving women some practical precautionary advice are the main objectives of the film.

It stresses that all rapes are individual cases that depend on a quick evaluation of the situation before any kind of preventiveaction is taken.

Interviews with rapists and rape victims, including an elderly lady, make up a large part of the film.

"Mature women who view the film are shocked to see it doesn't only happen to young, sexy looking chicks," Atwater said.

The film has been shown around the country for about a year and is always accompanied by a 90-page resource manual.

The Rape Relief centre in Victoria has a copy and the B.C. Police Commission also has a copy available on loan.

Carter urges oil import cut

Times News Services

U.S. President Jimmy Carter wants Canada and the other major industrial countries attending the Tokyo economic summit conference to make a joint effort to reduce oil imports, administration officials said Monday.

This might aggravate the oil shortage that has caused long gasoline lines in the United States. But officials said an import reduction would help avoid worse problems in the future.

"What we are after is a collective effort on the part of the countries at the summit to reduce energy imports and we will be working with those countries as we have in the past to come up with some common approach to doing this," said a U.S. spokesman

But he said the United States will not enter the summit with a preconceived plan on how such a reduction would be accomplished and he said he hopes other countries will also keep an open mind.

U.S. officials here are growing sensitive to what they feel may be a European effort to make it appear that the United States, in league with Japan, is blocking firm action to restrain oil imports. They worry that the United States might be unfairly blamed if the summit fails to agree on a joint effort to solve the oil crisis.

In addition to Canada and the U.S., the summit on Thursday and Friday will be attended by leaders of Britain, Japan, West Germany, France and Italy.

Prime Minister Joe Clark will represent Canada and plans to make a personal appeal of Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira to purchase Canadian nuclear reactors. (See story on page 8).

In Geneva, meanwhile, the 13 OPEC oil ministers today began the cartel's most crucial price-fixing conference since the world oil crisis five years ago. A substantial increase was certain, with only the exact amount in doubt.

The ministers met under tight security with current Ministerial Council Chairman Mana Saeed Otaiba of the United Arab Emirates presiding.

The conference, scheduled to last two or three days, has pitched conservative Saudi Arabia against OPEC's more radical members.

The Saudis are the only OPEC members to have stuck to the benchmark price of $14.54 fixed in March. The others all impose various surcharges,

Water break in C. Saanich

There was water, water everywhere and not a drop to drink when the main line serving Central Saanich burst at Martindale pump station early today.

Mike Williams, senior design engineer for the Capital Region District, said the break occurred about 12:15 a.m. but wasn't noticed until nearly two hours later.

By then several thousand gallons had spilled out of the 16-inch line flooding the pump station, eroding a section of the road to a depth of 10 feet and covering several acres of nearby agricultural land. There were unconfirmed reports two homes were damaged by the deluge.

Water service was knocked out for 10 to 20 farms and homes on Martindale Road and restrictions were slapped on all homeowners in the municipality for 24 hours.

Williams said the pipe should be repaired and service restored by later today but it will take several weeks before the pump station is fully operational.

Cause of the break is not known.

Eight-month Pacific Press strike over, papers Friday

VANCOUVER (CP) — The final two holdouts among six unions at Pacific Press have voted in favor of a new contract, clearing the way for Vancouver's two major daily newspapers to resume publication later this week after being shut down for almost eight months.

The Printing Pressmen's Union and the Wholesale Drivers' Union, which had earlier rejected the proposed 40-month pact, changed their minds in a second vote Monday.

The result of the vote was announced this morning by Dave McIntyre, secretary-treasurer of the British Columbia Federation of Labor which became directly involved in the dispute in the past few weeks. No figures were released.

The contract provides a 34.25-per-cent increase for the 1,400 workers.

Davey, who has not published a single edition of the Sun because his appointment came just as the strike began, said in an interview he wouldn't be happy "until I get the first copy in my hot little hand."

He said if the papers publish Friday the strike-lockout will be two days short of the record set earlier this year by the Montreal Star which was out for 243 days.

McIntyre, a former pressman's union leader, said the two holdout unions had reluctantly agreed to return to work. He said an agreement should have been reached long ago and blamed management for bargaining in bad faith.

McIntyre said the two unions were "quite unhappy" with the settlement and that the industrial relations climate at Pacific Press will have to improve during the term of the pact.

Under the bargaining arrangement at the company which produces the two papers, a majority in each of the six unions was needed to ratify the settlement proposals.

When the strike started, there were predictions it would last at least six months as the company indicated it was set to dig in its heels on the issue of press manning. The issue — the cause of long newspaper strikes in Montreal, New York and Washington — arises from a clause which determines how many workers operate the presses during a given shift.

A trucker was shot in North Carolina, seven rigs were burned in Massachusetts, and Tennessee offered a reward to protect working truckers as scattered violence continued in the strike by independent haulers.

In Levittown, Pa., officials banned gatherings of five or more people and received assurances of help from state police Monday after two days of violent clashes over gasoline shortages led to what the sheriff called "a complete breakdown of law and order."

"They burned cars, destroyed buildings, attacked police officers — it was a genuine riot," Raymond Grimes, a Levittown policeman, said of the disturbances. "It was not an orderly, get-in-line, walk-down-the-street demonstration."

Stockpiles of heating oil for the winter remain at all-time low levels in the United States and oil company executives say they may not be able to build them up enough to reach the government's target before winter.

The companies say they are trying to maintain a balance to satisfy both demand for gasoline and heating oil, but that producing enough heating oil may mean less gasoline this summer.

Against that background, a top federal official said Monday the government will take drastic steps if necessary to guarantee enough home heating oil this winter.

Tanker afire in collision

FIUMICINO, Italy (AP) — A French freighter and an Italian tanker carrying 1.5 million gallons of gasoline collided and burst into flames today, killing four persons and injuring 30, authorities said. They said at least 20 are missing.

The ships were identified as the 12,202-ton French-registered Emmanuel Delmas and the 4,942-ton Vera Berlingieri. The early morning collision occurred in heavy fog about 25 kilometres off this port near Rome.

Authorities said the French freighter, owned by the merchant ship firm Chargeurs Delmas Vieljeux based in Paris, had a crew of 30 and one passenger. The Italian tanker first was reported to have a crew of 22, but later the number on board was put at 24.

Dense fog shrouded the scene of the collision hampering the use of helicopters in rescue operations, authorities said. The rescue director said there was a danger the tanker might explode at any moment.

The commander of the Civitavecchia port, 80 kilometres north of Rome, who co-ordinated rescue operations, said four bodies had been recovered, all members of the French freighter's crew.

The commander, Aldo Savelli, said 23 members of the 24-man Italian tanker's crew were picked up by rescue ships. Many were injured, some with severe burns, Savelli said.

Three crew members of the Emmanuel Delmas were among the survivors picked up by rescue ships, he said.

Copters raid Nkomo's HQ

SALISBURY (UPI) — Zimbabwe Rhodesia's new black government today launched its first raid into Zambia and struck guerrilla chief Joshua Nkomo's headquarters near the capital of Lusaka.

The dawn raid by five helicopters killed 20 people, sources in Lusaka said, and was a show of strength designed to coincide with the opening of Zimbabwe Rhodesia's black-dominated Parliament. (See story on page 23).

But the session was nearly overshadowed by an announcement from James Chickerema, who resigned last week as the country's first vice president, that he may join forces with the black guerrillas operating in Zambia against the government in Salisbury.

Witnesses said commandos struck a guerrilla administrative centre in the Lusaka suburb of Roma at dawn. Sources in Lusaka said 20 people were killed and about the same number injured.

The Zimbabwe Rhodesian military command said one member of the strike force was killed and another wounded.

The raid on the "intelligence headquarters" of Nkomo's Zimbabwe Peoples Revolutionary Army was followed by an air strike "against a known terrorism base outside the city."

Lusaka, which will be host to the commonwealth conference to be opened by Queen Elizabeth Aug. 1, is 93 miles west of Zimbabwe Rhodesia's northwestern border.

The raids, the first into Zambia since Bishop Abel Muzorewa became prime minister, preceded the formal opening of Parliament, whose House of Assembly has 72 black and 28 white members.

After opening ceremonies, which stressed military might, some 200 screaming, placard-carrying Muzorewa supporters staged a demonstration against Chikerema, the veteran black politician who last week quit as first vice president and formed his own faction.

Chikerema held an impromptu news conference at which he said it is "very possible" he will seek an alliance with guerrilla leaders based outside the country as part of a drive for national unity.

E & N refused spray permit

CP Rail has been denied a permit to use herbicides along 200 miles of E & N Railway right-of-way.

The decision of the provincial government's Pesticide Control Appeal Board was welcomed today by John Cooper, chairman of the E & N Steering Committee, one of 13 Vancouver Island organizations which opposed the application at a Nanaimo hearing June 14 and 15.

"I think it's really significant ," Cooper said.

CP Rail sought a permit to use up to 2,400 pounds of herbicide — the soil sterilants tebuthiuron and bromacil — to control weed growth on the roadbed.

Opponents argued at the hearing that the problem of vegetation growth would not be so bad today if routine maintenance had not been neglected in the past.

Highways back on skids, road deaths soar 23%

The number of highway fatalities rose sharply again in April, continuing the general increase this year that reversed the drop in injury accidents last year.

Fatalities in April jumped 23 per cent over the same month last year and injuries were up 21 per cent.

The use of seatbelts became mandatory in B.C. 18 months go.

That legislation, combined with the earlier speed limit reduction and the CounterAttack program aimed at drinking drivers, were believed responsible for a March decline in auto injuries and deaths last year.

But the trend reversed in 1979. During the first four months of the year — the latest statistics available — all seven categories of auto accidents montitored by the government are up over the same period last year.

From January through April, fatalities jumped 23 per cent, injuries increased 26 per cent and the number of accidents was up 12 per cemt.

Property damage accidents increased nine per cent.

The Motor Vehicle Branch feels people are still buckling up so other causes are responsible for the increase in injury accidents.

Officials said earlier some motorists are frustrated by the lower speed limits and habitually exceed it.

Others obey the lower speeds and the combination has led to an increase in accidents in passing situations.

Fire risk closes park trails

Trails in Mount Douglas and Thetis Lake parks were closed to the public today due to the fire hazard.

Park administrator Al Smith said the ruling does not include picnic and swimming areas.

Regional parks, such as East Sooke and Witty's Lagoon parks, remain open.

Warm weather often brings fog to the Strait of Juan de Fuca which reduces fire hazards along the island's coastal belt.

Sheila McHugh found out that our neighbors to the south are pretty good Joes when it comes to the crunch.

Last week she faced a mammoth problem of finding homes for 26 Mexican students due to arrive here on Friday to take part in a two-momth summer exchange program.

She could find homes for only five.

The students are taking part in Intercambio International, a cultural exchange involving Canadian and Mexican students, started by a Mexican priest 25 years ago. Victoria has taken part in the program for 10 years.

Stumped locally, Mrs. McHugh got in touch with friends in the U.S. and homes have been found for all 21 students. That's really hands-across-the-border stuff.

Gas rationing, by necessity, is all the rage in the U.S. and weird and wonderful are the ways in which the precious fuel is allotted to travellers.

In some areas, an odd and even gas rationing system is in effect with drivers filling up on the basis of the last number of their licence plates.

But an Everett, Wash., marina owner has come up with what Town Talk thinks is a fair way to divvy up his gas supply.

His system calls for boat owners to get gas in an amount proportionate to the length of their boat.

If you've got a 21-footer, you get to buy a maximum of 21 gallons, a 10-footer gets 10 gallons and so on.

Might be an idea to try the same for cars.

Along with two doctors, she has helped to examine and treat nearly 2,000 patients since the medical clinic opened in December, 1975.

Boldt is a nurse practitioner, or as she says, "a nurse who assumes responsibility for jobs previously seen as physicians' jobs."

How do you become one?

Boldt, a registered nurse, took her extra training at McGill University in Montreal. It was a crash four-month Arctic nurse course.

In addition to long hours of absorbing theory, she and her fellow students were constantly on call at Montreal General Hospital, putting into practice what they had learned in the classroom.

At that time she worked for the federal government and when she graduated was sent to Pangnirtung, a community of 800 on Baffin Island in the Northwest Territories. For a year, she and another nurse practitioner were totally responsible for the health of the community.

She recalls many anxious moments when bad weather delayed a plane coming in to transport a sick child needing more sophisticated treatment.

At the James Bay medical clinic, Boldt does laboratory tests, cardiograms, helps women with gynecology problems, prescribes drugs and performs other medical duties traditionally considered outside the sphere of nursing.

When prescribing drugs, she says, she tends to be cautious because the two doctors are responsible to the B.C. Medical Association for her actions.

Boldt sees the use of nurse practitioners as one way doctors can improve their medical practice by freeing them to see more patients.

But the program set up by the provincial ministry of health is not condusive to this.

Under the Medical Services Plan, there is no provision for doctors to claim fees for services carried out by a nurse practitioner.

The Capital Regional District also has two nurse practitioners on its payroll. One is on Mayne Island and the other at Port Renfrew.

Lavinia Crane of the provincial public health services agrees most nurse practitioners work at medical clinics or in isolated areas in the employment of some government agency. One, for instance, works in the Fraser River area, 50 miles from the closest doctor.

In 1973 and 1974, the University of B.C. offered nurse practitioner courses but these have been discontinued.

Instead, regular courses like the one offered at the University of Victoria expand their curricula to include some of the theory of a nurse pratitioner course.

Other provinces in Canada are making increased use of nurse practitioners to provide some sort of stable medical care in isolated areas.

Because of its terrain, B.C. is considered an area which could make good use of trained nurse practitioners where medical services are limited.

But it may be a long time before nurse practitioners become more than a rare breed in B.C.

By PAUL MOSS

Capital Region Board chairman Ald. Murray Glazier will urge the board Wednesday to ask the B.C. Supreme Court to quash a recent Saanich council bylaw approving a major shopping centre on the Tillicum outdoor theatre site.

Glazier said he believes the legal action is necessary because the Saanich bylaw conflicts with the regional plan.

The board recently asked the provincial government to hold up the shopping centre project until its impact on the region as a whole could be assessed.

"He (the minister) understands the board's concern but he doesn't see the public interest as being affected," Glazier said.

The only recourse now open to the regional board is to refer the matter to the courts for a ruling, he added.

Glazier said the Municipal Act spells out that neither the regional board nor a component council of a regional district can do anything that impedes the realization of the regional plan's objectives.

"As far as I know the status of the regional plan has not been tested and it is important we do so," he added.

Payment sought for hall damage

A spokesman, who asked that his name not be used, would only say today the society will be "dealing with the situation."

He indicated some compensation will be sought but refused to elaborate.

"Enough has already been said," he said.

Society members themselves called in the press to take pictures and report on the damage done last Saturday in the aftermath of a grad party organized by students of Claremont.

A 20-year-old city man who died after being knocked down by a car on the Trans-Canada Highway near Helmcken May 5 and the driver of the car that struck him were both to blame, a coroner's jury ruled Monday night.

The jury also said the driver, Dennis Keith Boyd, 20, of 806 Stanehill Place, in Metchosin, should share the blame because he was driving without using high beams, was tired, not fully responsive, and failed to drive with caution knowing his speedometer was not working.

Eldridge died in Victoria General Hospital at about 3:30 a.m., a half hour after the accident.

Testimony given during the inquest showed Eldridge had been at a party earlier in the evening and was crossing the highway about 500 metres north of Helmcken with a friend, Kenneth Wilde, 20, of 3139 Glasgow.

Wilde made it to the other side but Eldridge was struck by the car as he stepped from the concrete divide in the centre of the highway.

Station attack baffles Glazier

The E & N Steering Committee Monday came out in opposition to Glazier's plan, saying the proposed site at the foot of Pandora near the Johnson Street bridge is inadequate.

Steering committee head John Cooper said Glazier's location, which has been tentatively endorsed by Via Rail, isn't suitable as a multi-transportation terminal where bus, air and rail services could link.

But Glazier says he's never suggested the Pandora site as a location to serve the various transportation systems.

"It's not now and it never was proposed as anything like that," said Glazier. "It's a downtown terminal — period."

Glazier attacked Cooper for misleading people and said the committee's stand baffles him.

"I've always tried to point out that the downtown stop is just that, a stop, and if there is a multi-transportation terminal (elsewhere) in the future, then so be it."

Glazier said a station just past the end of the bridge would be an ideal spot to let off E & N passengers because they would be within easy walking distance of shopping areas, carparks and local bus stops.

"I find it really very hard to understand why John Cooper is attempting to frustrate and delay the idea of the train coming into downtown Victoria," said Glazier.

Cooper said the larger site would allow for a sizeable terminal that could accommodate links with other transportation systems.

In a letter to Via Rail president Frank Roberts, Cooper has urged an in-depth study of the all the various locations in the city that would be appropriate for a new station.

He said such a study is needed to determine intermodal suitability for tomorrow's integrated public transportation system.

Glazier said Via Rail spokesmen assured him in meetings last week that they want to move the station closer to town and that they favor the Pandora site.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was mixed in active mid-afternoon trading today.

Trading in Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd. resumed at 12:15 p.m. after a halt called at about 10:45 a.m. The company said it plans to make a public offering of about five million additional common shares during the week of July 30. The stock was unchanged at $31 by 2 p.m.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said re-designated and subdivided shares of C.A.E. Industries Ltd. will be posted for trading at the opening Wednesday, replacing the currently listed A and B shares. Shareholders on June 20 approved the re-designation of the A and B shares into common shares without par value and a two-for-one split of the common shares.

Among industrials, Canadian Occidental Petroleum gained 1 to $42½, Noranda Mines 1 to $50⅜, Falconbridge Nickel A 1 to $65, Canadian Pacific ⅞ to $43¾ and Imperial Oil A ⅛ to $37⅞.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed in New York, failing to make an early advance stand up.

The government reported this morning that the consumer price index rose 1.1 per cent last month, maintaining a double-digit annual pace in the rise of the cost of living.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, meanwhile, was meeting in Geneva to decide on a new oil price increase.

Analysts said such negative news seemed to be offset in part by spreading expectations of an economic slowdown, and an accompanying decline in interest rates. The bond market, which reacts directly to changes in interest-rate expectations, has been rallying lately.

Energy stocks dominated the active list. Occidental Petroleum dropped ¼ to $23¾; Tesoro Petroleum was up ⅜ to $17⅜; Amerada Hess lost ⅛ to $47⅝; Mesa Petroleum was up 2 to $61¼, and Continental Oil rose ⅜ to $37⅝.

The NYSE's composite index gained .05 to 57.95.

Montreal

Child film stars: precociousness prevails

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Kid actors are a breed apart, each different in his own way, each with one foot in the adult world and the other in childhood, never really belonging to either.

Juvenile stars grow up in the spotlight which often is inimicable to normal psychological growth. Some survive to become adult stars. Some don't.

He is the only son of W.G. and Edmonia Coleman of Zion, Ill., some 60 miles south of Chicago. His parents are quiet and dignified. W.G. is an inspector for a pharmaceutical company.

The Coleman family makes its home in Zion but is looking for a temporary residence in Hollywood to accomodate their son's acting career.

Mrs. Coleman remains with Gary at all times. It is necessary to give her son daily medication. He underwent a kidney transplant 5 ½ years ago which has inhibited his growth. It is the only inhibition in the youngster's makeup.

Scott's World

During lunch the other day Gary did most of the talking as his patient parents lifted their eyebrows and shrugged their shoulders in resignation.

But the elder Coleman did manage to explain that Gary climbed out of his crib when he was only two months old and has been on the move ever since. He began talking at 13 months, entertaining his grandparents and everyone else.

"When he was five, we found an agent in Chicago," Coleman said. "We knew from the time he began to talk that he had a special quality about him. He was a natural entertainer.

"Gary did about 30 TV commercials. We brought him to Hollywood for the pilot of The Little Rascals, a Norman Lear project that didn't become a series.

"Then Mr. Lear took Gary into his office for a conference. Not long after that he signed Gary to a contract put him in Diff'rent Strokes."

Gary, wearing a Spider Man T-shirt, said, "Everybody thinks me and Arnold Jackson, the kid I play in the show, are alike. But we aren't.

"I'm more subtle and playful than Arnold. He's a little bit funny, but California people will laugh at anything."

His mother said, "You and Arnold are one and the same boy. Neither one of you keep your room straight."

"I'll get you for that," Gary replied. "I like a messy room. I like junk. Sometimes I like acting and sometimes I don't. It's no fun going to work at 7:30 in the morning.

"And I don't like being famous or being interviewed. Being famous is no fun. It's too much trouble because I can't be myself. Wherever I go people pick me up and try to kiss me. Blah. I hate to be picked over.

WE'LL DO OUR PART IN THE FIGHT AGAINST INFLATION

We are constantly looking for good buys (seasonal products in plentiful supply, special manufacturer promotions, etc.) that we can pass along to customers in the form of weekly price specials.

We are exploring every opportunity to reduce expenses in such areas as processing, storage and transportation of goods.

We help our customers stretch their food dollars in these ways:

a) We tell customers about our merchandise selections so they can make informed choices;
b) We distribute money-saving recipes and meal planning ideas.

We are striving to cut energy costs through proper maintenance and in-store control as well as energy-efficient building designs.

We are testing new technology in cash registers and other store innovations intended to aid our customers.

We are expanding our product lines to permit one-stop shopping and save consumers inconvenience as well as the expense of cross-town travel.

We are re-investing company profits in modern stores, improved services and added jobs.

we can be
